FERRIES ENDING OFF-PEAK RATES

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia ferry users travelling during off-peak periods in an effort to save money will pay more when the new rates come into effect June 1.

At present, off-peak passengers can travel the four major ferry routes — linking the Vancouver area to Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Sunshine Coast — for half-price Monday through Thursday as well as Saturday. Drivers and Monday are not eligible.

Off-peak passengers pay $2 instead of $4 for a one-way ticket on the island runs, and $2 for return passage to the Sunshine Coast.

When the new rates become effective June 1, however, everyone will pay $3 for a one-way ticket to the islands and $3 for the Sunshine Coast return ticket.

Bill Bouchard, ferry corporation assistant traffic manager, said the off-peak program, effective last March 7, was to be lifted May 31 and reinstated Oct. 1 but now will have to be reviewed in light of the reduction in fares announced by Premier Bill Bennett.

Bouchard said he did not know whether a revised off-peak program would be reinstated in the fall.

Reduced rates for group travel and handicapped persons are still available under the new fare structure, he added.

Sask. Fires Critical

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The department of northern Saskatchewan asked for volunteers today to help fight a critical forest fire situation.

At least 100 recruits were asked to report to control headquarters here to assist more than 700 men already battling 20 fires, 10 of them out of control.

The situation became critical Thursday when high winds, dry conditions and lightning ignited several new fires.

The most serious fires burning out of control were in the Dore Lake, Weyakwan, Monet Lake and Fishing Lake areas.

People living at Michelle Point on Dore Lake, 120 miles northwest of here, and at Caribou Creek Lodge on the Hamson Lake Road were evacuated Thursday. Power lines serving Dore Lake were severed by fire Thursday.

Two — helicopters and a Canso aircraft from Ontario were brought in to assist on the fire sites and additional ground supplies were being trucked in from Alberta.

$1B Hospital Bill Faces Province

The annual cost of operating the hospitals in the province may top $1 billion by 1980, Health Minister Bob McClelland said on Friday.

McClelland said the current budget for running the hospitals is $615 million, up from $185 million in 1970.

"The costs have increased by more than 300 per cent during a period when our population went up only 18 per cent," the minister told members of the B.C. Medical Association meeting here for their 77th annual convention. (See other stories on page 6).

McClelland said other medical costs have also soared, from $128 million in 1970 to the current $340 million.

He said the government has committed itself to spend $500 million in new hospital construction over the next five years — a rate of $100 million a year.

By comparison the government spent about $40 million in such construction over the past five-year period.

Construction costs have more than doubled in recent years, he said. Whereas in 1970 an acute-care hospital cost about $40,000 per bed to build, now the bill is $100,000 per bed.

TENNIS ENTRY TIME

PARIS (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau left Paris for Ottawa today apparently convinced France will stay neutral on separatist pressures within the Canadian province of Quebec.

At no moment during Trudeau's three-day special visit here did French leaders led by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing try to put pressure on Trudeau to enhance the Quebec independence's political aims, Canadian and French officials indicated.

Trudeau, looking slightly annoyed by French reporters' efforts to belabor the Quebec issue, said that the problem of Quebec had not even come up when Trudeau met Giscard Friday at an Elysee Palace luncheon followed by a private talk.

It was left to Gerard Peltier, Canadian ambassador and an old federalist friend of the prime minister, to provide the Canadian news corps with the prime minister's optimism that Paris will not support Quebec separation as the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle did in 1967.

Peltier told reporters that French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud had publicly told Claude Morin, Quebec inter-governmental affairs minister, two weeks ago that France is not competent to become involved in Canadian affairs and will keep out of them.

Because of Morin's visit, Canadian reporters watched for indications during Trudeau's stay that might show French favoritism toward Quebec independence. For instance, it was noted that Morin had 55 minutes with Giscard d'Estaing, Trudeau had only 46 minutes.

The prime minister said his time with Giscard d'Estaing was spent on two main issues — nuclear proliferation and the state of Western democracy.

Pressed by French newsmen Friday night to speak up on the Quebec issue, Trudeau said pointedly he would have found it "impertinent" to be questioned officially in Paris about "attempts to break up Canada."

The minister said that when the legislature resumes he will introduce a bill to amend the Insurance Corporation Act to make it unnecessary for a minister of the Crown to be ICBC president.

The corporation should be operated in future on sound business and insurance principles.

McGeer would not say who he had in mind to succeed him as ICBC president.

The corporation's revenue was $385 million, compared with $183.4 million at the last report.

Autoplain claims were down from an expected total of 490,000 to 370,000.

ICBC said its sound financial position allows for a program of incentives and reserves, including $52.3 million for safe driving discounts and $11.5 million for a rate stabilization reserve.

Commission rates for autoplain agents were reduced but agents' revenue was up 50 per cent to more than $27 million because of higher premiums, the corporation said.

McGeer said that in the field of general insurance, IBC now is the biggest underwriter in B.C. and has turned the 1975-76 loss of $4 million into a $1.5 million profit.

He predicted that next year, when the once-a-year car insurance deadline for all drivers is replaced with a month-by-month, cyclical system, there will be little need to continue the practice of hiring large numbers of part-time employees.

The Globe and Mail quotes sources as saying the information could be used by other federal departments, the RCMP and, at the discretion of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, outsiders such as collection agencies.

CLARK BACKS DOWN

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition Leader Joe Clark, who endorsed the idea of a 10-year moratorium on construction of a northern pipeline earlier this week, was forced to eat his words Friday.

He was politically outmaneuvered by New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent, who proposed in a formal motion that the government accept Mr. Justice Thomas Berger's main recommendation for a delay, a motion that was defeated by a vote of 159 to 14 when Clark's Progressive Conservatives sided with the government Liberals and the Creditistes.

The mood of the House during the vote was mainly jocular, but it took a nasty turn when Clark rose to lead his party in voting down the motion. A core of Liberals at that point began chanting "flip-flop, flip-flop," a shot at what Clark had said when the Berger report was brought down Monday.

He, as well as Broadbent, had said then that as Berger's evidence, he reiterated Friday. However, the fundamental fact for Parliament and the people of Canada to understand is that there is other evidence yet to come ... which deserves to be considered as seriously as the Berger report.

It would be hard to contest Berger's evidence, he reiterated Friday. However, the fundamental fact for Parliament and the people of Canada to understand is that there is other evidence yet to come ... which deserves to be considered as seriously as the Berger report.

Aviation Unions Billed For Negotiating Trips

By DAN POTTIER

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal ministry of transport (MOT) has billed two major aviation unions for airfare totalling $13,782 only to be told — "We ain't gonna pay."

Although it's no laughing matter, the dispute over the bill has caused a few chuckles among officials of the Canadian Airline Pilots Assn. (CALPA) and the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Assn. (CATCA).

CATCA was billed for $5,855.54 and CALPA for $7,836.46 to cover the cost of government-supplied aircraft to bring their executives to Ottawa for meetings during the conflict over bilingualism in Quebec airspace last June.

Union spokesmen said the bills, one year later, are ridiculous and "funny as hell" and can only guess at the reasons for the invoices.

CATCA President Jim Livingston said in an interview the officials came to Ottawa at MOT's request and that the department had offered to supply the transportation.

At the time, civil aviation in Canada was grounded, mainly due to CATCA and CALPA actions in the dispute described as a "crisis" by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Livingston said MOT aircraft and a chartered CP Air Boeing 737 were used to bring in about 15 officials representing both associations from across the country.

The meetings called by MOT to deal with the crisis were held, a partial solution found and that's where the matter lay until last month when the bills arrived.

CATCA and CALPA wrote MOT saying they would not Ulster Strike Ends

Times News Services

BELFAST — Northern Ireland's militant Protestants have called off their faltering 11-day strike but their leader Rev. Ian Paisley said today the general strike has been "a resounding success" despite the British government's contention to the contrary.

"It's over," Ulster Defence Association chief Andy Tyrie told reporters as he emerged at midnight Friday from a 50-minute emergency session of the Paisley-led Ulster Unionist Action Council which called the strike that never quite got off the ground.

Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, Roy Mason, today praised Ulster workers who ignored the strike call as being "10 feet tall."

But Paisley told a news conference the strike "has been a resounding success" despite government claims 80 per cent of the province's workers stayed at their jobs and defied intimidation and physical violence.

The militant leader warned Mason he would call another general walkout — this time probably limiting it to 48 hours — if the security situation in Northern Ireland deteriorated.

British authorities, who owed to break the strike, claimed two-thirds of the work force stayed on the job despite widespread intimidation by Protestant street gangs.

The strike was dealt a decisive blow Thursday when the British government used ferry boats from England and Scotland to reopen the port of Larne, the only key industrial facility shut down by extremists.

Pharmacare: Good and Bad

Premier Bill Bennett's long-awaited announcement of a universal pharmacare program to be effective June 1 is indeed welcome news, but the manner of its presentation was both petty and deceptive. According to the premier's Nainaimo statement, the scheme will continue (thank heaven) to provide free prescription drugs to the elderly, the handicapped and the poor. The major addition to the program is a provision for an 80 per cent rebate to all citizens for medication costs over $100 annually. Also covered for the first time will be such necessary items as prosthetic devices, and insulin syringes for diabetics. While the number of British Columbians overburdened with drug costs and not already on pharmacare is comparatively small, these new benefits will be a great assistance to many citizens, particularly the chronically ill.

The government also deserves praise for its restrained approach to a new area of government assistance. By applying the $100 deductible to each family unit rather than each individual, it has kept the personal cost burden down while discouraging wanton abuse of the system. Similarly, by forcing the customer to file an application for a refund rather than simply supplying free drugs, the government will discourage the acquisition of unnecessary or marginally needed medications. Quite rightly, those already covered by pharmacare will continue to receive drugs without payment, leaving the pharmacist to collect from the government.

Premier Bennett, however, has rarely been one to leave well enough alone and his otherwise triumphant moment Thursday was marred by an unwarranted and indefensible attack on the New Democratic Party opposition. The premier accused the NDP of causing alarm and dismay by suggesting that the new pharmacare scheme might put an end to free medication for the elderly and the handicapped by including a universal deductible clause. The NDP, he said, had deliberately used old people as a political football to throw at the Social Credit government.

In fact, the very opposite is true. The suggestion that free pharmacare might end came from the government, not the opposition, and Bennett has only himself to blame for any heartache the confusion may have caused. Consider the following: In its budgetary estimates for the current fiscal year the government allotted $25.9 million for pharmacare while admitting that to continue the program in its present form would require $35 million. At the same time, a Manitoba pharmacare official consulted by the B.C. government disclosed that the Socreds were seriously considering a $25 deductible provision for the elderly, handicapped and poor and this was confirmed by a B.C. pharmacare spokesman. Furthermore, when questions about a possible deductible clause was put to Bennett and Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm from mid-January to the end of March, both consistently refused to answer. Clearly, if anyone is to blame for leaving the elderly in confusion, it is Bennett and his cabinet. Far from using old people as a political football, the opposition — and Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson and Tory Scott Wallace played a major role — should be congratulated for responsibly forcing the government to abandon its idea of foisting a deductible provision on those who can ill afford it. If Bennett would act as responsibly and honestly, our government would be much improved.

Ferries: Reductions, but . . .

British Columbians on both Vancouver Island and the mainland are justifiably relieved that the Social Credit government has finally come through with some very necessary cuts in ferry fares. They are also justifiably cautious in their praise and congratulations. In the first place, the average 20 per cent reduction is not enough — the minimum should have been 25 per cent. Secondly, the new fares have probably come too late to give an adequate boost to the Island's tourist industry this summer — there are still just too many people who associate the B.C. ferry system with outrageous prices and depressing service. But more importantly, Premier Bill Bennett has indicated that his government's basic attitude to running the ferry fleet has not changed and this does not bode well for the traveler or the tourist.

That last year's doubling and tripling of rates was a foolhardy move made in a period of intense political warfare is a fact accepted by practically everyone from tourist operators to casual travellers. This is still not accepted by Premier Bennett. That the action sharply decreased traffic and hurt the tourist industry is also self-evident. This, according to Bennett, was not a major factor in the decision to reduce fares as of June 1. The cuts were made possible, he maintains, by good management, current economic circumstances and a $8 million federal subsidy. Last year's rate hike was a proper action at the time and further increases may be necessary in the future, he says.

Instead of the logical mea culpa, we are hearing the premier tell us once again that economics, not the needs of people, will dictate how this vital highway link is operated. We are pleased that all travelers will be at least partly relieved of the excessive cost of B.C. ferry travel and that those with overweight vehicles will enjoy an ever greater — about 37 per cent — reduction. And we are especially happy to learn that the government will try to improve the dreadful soup kitchen facilities now on board and attempt some reconciliation with the ferry employees it has so thoroughly demoralized. But we cannot condone the government's continuing refusal to see the ferry link as a service rather than a business. As long as this view is held, a ferry trip in B.C. will remain an unpredictable boomer rather than a pleasant journey.

Our town and its institutions always seem to be on collision course.

Neighborhoods are in a constant state of guerrilla warfare with an insensitive city hall, the symphony establishment rarely gets along with its manager or musical director, and various cabals are chronic.

Another such contretemps has been knowing at me for almost two weeks, the ripples of which go far beyond this community and effect our national fabric.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce President Alan Emery grumps about housewives and dilettantes squeezing out serious law students at the University of Victoria's new law school.

"There are a number of women taking law who have no intention of being anything but housewives and some men are taking it for a lark," Emery said.

Until the space problem is resolved the school should admit only those who seriously intend to practice law. All the

UVic Dean of Law Murray Fraser agrees that the law school should be expanded from its current total enrollment of 180 but adds that the school does not have any right to turn people away who are highly qualified. "Some might be planning to go into politics or public administration or social work. Others just might be taking law for self improvement," Fraser said.

Who is right? And remember that

Emery is correct in saying that tuition fees cover only a small portion of the cost of educating a student. The rest comes out of the public purse.

Both men nibble around the question of whether education is an end in its own right or whether it should function as a factory for the voracious marketplace somewhere out there beyond the Strait of Georgia. One also detects the hint of a parochial resentment towards the law school in Emery's remarks, the old Victoria College syndrome that held this university back for so many years.

Victoria College was the closest thing to higher learning on this island at one time. Through a long osmotic process aided by the catalyst of many dollars it became a university. Atavisms surfaced occasionally in the form of president with a questionable degree who was chosen by a board of naive merchants, but generally speaking, standards continue to improve.

Not all the locals accepted an independent community of scholars, though, and when a new law school was proposed Victoria's lawyers contently envisioned a parade of three piece suits at the bar and a solid grounding in torts and taxation.

Instead they saw an argumentative group of highly human students who boast little in common except dedication to the law. Some are middle aged and a full 40 per cent of the student body is female, a statistic which means at least some of Victoria's finest sons were rejected and forced to head for the steppes in search of legal education.

Not that any of this background precipitated Emery's remarks, but some people among Victoria's professional community have been seen to scowl at the mention of this mixed bag.

Yet it would seem to me that one of the strengths of UVic's law school is its diversity. Legions of legal names decorate scores of frosted windows in every city and town across this country, while a real need exists for specialists in the fields of consumer law and family law to mention only two areas. The neglected field of constitutional law is also going to be very important as this country sorts itself out of historic rigidities.

For a profession in which women are so badly represented, UVic is hard at work to correct a traditional injustice. No longer will phlegmatic corporations explain the paucity of women on the board of directors by saying they can't find qualified females. And who is better qualified for family law than a housewife and mother?

Fraser and his colleagues need support for their forethought. A professional school conducted in the imaginative manner of UVic's law faculty is a dynamic example of relevant and creative education.

To say housewives and middle aged people clutter hardpressed law schools misses the point. It is these people who will bring new thinking and concepts to what used to be a wooden and conservative profession. Their experience will reform the law.

The chamber of commerce should be so lucky to have such an imaginative infusion — G.R.O.

Unjust System

Where is justice in our judicial system? A recent run in with the courts has left no doubt in my mind that there is only justice for the accused, but no compensation for the victims.

I was assaulted in November, 1976, by a man I pressed charges and the accused pleaded not guilty. The trial date was originally set for April 26, 1977, an impossible time because the witnesses and I are university students lucky enough to have summer jobs. However, my job is in Trail and began at the end of April. When I visited the crown prosecutor's office he suggested dropping this "minor assault charge," because the court cost would be greater than the penalty involved. He eventually agreed to set another date. A call from a court clerk six weeks later, verified that a request had been received, but contained no explanation of the charge.

At court on April 5, we three witnesses waited outside the court for one hour before the crown prosecutor appeared, stating there was no time for our case today. I explained why the date had been moved forward and he again suggested dropping the case. He was rude when I politely tried to ask him when a new date could be set, but finally agreed to look into this. Meanwhile, the accused and his lawyer sat in the back of the court snickering. When I phoned the provincial court the following day, they told me "the case was dismissed for want of prosecution."

Why should witnesses and victims be persecuted by the system when the accused are set free? This is why witnesses don't come forward and people are afraid to press charges. The system is unjust and I can guarantee I won't be a witness again until some changes are made. — Brenda Andrew, Trail, B.C.

Intense Dislike

The idea of leaning on the Parti Quebecois must have come very naturally for the rest of the country and it is therefore far more susceptible than any other group in the House of Commons to be influenced positively by that overwhelming event.

Because the Creditistes have always had an intuitive rather than intellectual grasp of political issues it is impossible to tell whether their more prominent opportunism is the product of sincerity or of opportunism. Motives probably vary from one supporter to another. However, there is no denying that the support granted to the Parti Quebecois cause might prove beneficial.

The five by-elections this month will tell whether the Creditiste movement in Quebec is on its way out or whether it can hope to remain the principal opposition spokesman in the province. From a high of 25 seats 15 years ago it has sunk to the level of 10 now. Real Caouette's death last November was probably the harshest blow of all to the party's prospects.

Electoral support of this kind would provide the Parti Quebecois with some sympathetic voices in the House of Commons, and it is this additional advantage which Andre Fortin has been dangling in front of their eyes. Because of the delay in the choice of creditiste candidates, it is still too early to say whether the anticipated organizational support will materialize and whether voters who supported the Parti Quebecois provincially will act on Fortin's invitation. But whatever the outcome on May 24, the more or less discreet link-up could have interesting repercussions on the federal general elections which are expected some time in 1978.

Concurrently, the government must proceed with development programs for natives on an orderly basis and avoid the devastating social and economic impacts of an instant pipeline on a people still unprepared.

It will be important to this process that those who are impatient for the delivery of justice to the North American heartland should not make native peoples the scapegoats for the consequences of old and short-sighted energy policies — Joanne Hoople, Executive Director, Canadian Association in Support of the Native Peoples, Ottawa.

Closed Meetings

In a time of economic stress administrative processes must reflect sober fiscal responsibility. No sensible person can dispute that. But does this principle excuse our city council reducing its accountability to the press? I am personally very disturbed when I see council shutting the press out of its financial meetings, and dumping also the caucus meetings where the people's business was discussed openly and publicly. Now I learn that the Newhouse Report recommends that the press should be prevented from witnessing the policy-making process. Does it become fairly clear that our city council, having commissioned the report, now is perilously close to approving a denial of basic democracy? What is the real reason for keeping the press out of peoples' business?

Can fiscal responsibility excuse this threat? I urge Victorians to weigh the issue carefully — Roba K. Blencoe, 115 Princess Avenue.

Berger Report

Justice Berger's report is a uniquely thorough examination of the fears and aspirations of northern native people and of threats to the environment of the north which, soon enough, would affect the lives of most Canadians. The government must accept the findings for which it asked and should now proceed seriously to resolve land claims.

At the time of the 1966 provincial elections a fairly large number of Creditistes flocked to the newly-founded Ralliement National, which was an ultra-conservative separatist party under the leadership of Dr. Rene Jutras. 'Revolution Blueprint'

By MARJORIE NICHOLS

OTTAWA

Upon tabling the first volume of the Berger commission report in the House of Commons on May 12, Northern Affairs Minister Warren Allmand issued a brief statement riddled with understatement. "The report is the product of the most comprehensive examination of Northern Canada that has been undertaken in at least a decade," said the northern affairs minister. "... Its findings are presented with great clarity of language."

Correction. The artfully illustrated and beautifully written document presented to the government of Canada by Mr. Justice Thomas R. Berger is the most comprehensive examination of northern Canada ever undertaken. Its findings are presented not just with clarity of language, but with impeccably researched argumentation.

Mr. Allmand's noticeable parsimony of praise for the efforts of Mr. Justice Berger over the past three years probably was no accident. The Berger report provides the government with far more information than it wanted. This is not to suggest that the judge went beyond his terms of reference, but it is to suggest that the government would have been happier if the author had tried harder to pretend that this was a study primarily about pipelines.

Mr. Justice Berger started out with pipelines, but what he ended up with is a blueprint for political revolution in the North. The B.C. Supreme Court judge, being a man of judicious expression, would never use a word like "Revolution." But that is, in effect, what this report is all about: the need for a revolutionary rethinking of the social, economic and political standards being applied in the North.

Mid-way through his report, the judge himself makes the point: "Both the white and the native people in the North realize that the government's decision on the pipeline and on the way in which native claims are settled will determine whether the political evolution of the North will follow the pattern of the history of the West or whether it will find a place for native ideas of self-determination. The settlement of native claims must be the point of departure for any political reorganization."

That is why the decision on the pipeline is really a decision about the political future of the Northwest Territories. The people of the North are seeking nothing less than a "new confederation," says Mr. Justice Berger.

The report makes emphatically clear the author's conclusion that what is needed is a radically different system of government, wherein the native peoples could pursue their right to "self-determination."

The judge-commissioner has recommended that Ottawa postpone for at least a decade a decision on whether to build a pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley. The idea would be to give the government the time to negotiate native land claims. Mr. Justice Berger warns that the consequence of proceeding with the pipeline project prior to the settlement of native claims could be violence, or as he puts it:

"What are the implications of not recognizing that right and proceeding with the pipeline before settlement? Feelings of frustration and disappointment among the native people of the North would be transformed into bitterness and rage. There is a real possibility of civil disobedience and civil disorder."

The report carefully disavows any suggestion that this "civil disobedience" could erupt into a full-blown rebellion, but it then goes on to cite the circumstances leading up to the Riel Rebellion.

If the Berger report had recommended a settlement of native claims along traditional lines, there would have been no problem. The government could simply have given an undertaking to commence bargaining.

The Trudeau government had been aware of the thoroughness of the research and painstaking evaluations being undertaken by the Berger inquiry, but it is doubtful that any members of the government expected the arguments to be put with such forcefulness.

In effect, Mr. Justice Thomas Berger has tied the hands of Pierre Elliott Trudeau. In theory, no final decision will be made on the Mackenzie Valley pipeline route until after the National Energy Board reports in July. But the Berger conclusion would seem to create insurmountable political obstacles to a cabinet decision to proceed with construction.

If the Berger report had recommended a settlement of native claims along traditional lines, there would have been no problem. The government could simply have given an undertaking to commence bargaining.

But Mr. Justice Berger has proposed a totally novel solution. It is not good enough, he says, to pay the natives for their lands, as was done in both Alaska and James Bay. The native people must be given control over their lands to do with them as they themselves may decide.

"Constitutionally," says the commissioner, "there is no bar to the native ownership of land or to a guarantee of native institutions of self-government in a new province... It is certainly within Parliament's power to reorganize the territorial government to permit a devolution of self-government to Dene and Inuit institutions... There is nothing in the constitution that would preclude the kind of settlement the native people of the North are seeking."

He says bluntly that the native peoples of the North must be given a "special status" within Confederation, and he recommends that control of education be turned over to the natives. He debates the possibility of limiting the voting rights of non-natives. The native people no longer believe, says the judge, that the white man's word is enough.

What the report recommends, in fact, is not a delay to enable some land claim negotiations. It recommends the establishment of self-government for the native peoples of the North as a precondition to the further discussion of a pipeline.

A guess is that Mr. Trudeau and his ministers are right now looking with keen interest at the Alaska Highway route.

Bloody History Not Forgotten

By ROY REED

BELFAST

It would be easy to say that the origins of the Protestant rage in Northern Ireland are lost in history. But little of Ulster's bloody history has ever been lost, and that is a large part of its trouble.

One freshly daubed wall sign says, "Remember 1690." That was the date of the Battle of Boyne where a Protestant king defeated a Catholic king and made Ulster safe, it was thought, for Presbyterians. Another sign, painted by the same brush, says, "No surrender." If the Protestants won 287 years ago, why do they still vow never to surrender?

Ulster Protestants see no contradiction. Many of them believe they are still under siege, just as they have been since they began to move in among the hostile natives (Catholics) in the early 1600s.

"No surrender" happens to be the battle cry of the hard-line Protestant movement led by the Rev. Ian Paisley, the leader of last week's general strike that was meant to end direct British rule and restore a Protestant-dominated provincial government under the Crown, at Belfast. For about 25 years, Protestants in growing numbers have been following the fiery Paisley. They turn to him for some of the same reasons that white American Southerners, seeing themselves besieged, once turned to George Wallace. The man "tells it like it is," he "doesn't pull punches," he "won't make deals with them," he "stands for us." And above all Paisley vows never to surrender to the forces of the anti-Christ Pope.

What the Protestants want is simple. The vast majority want to stay under British rule, even with the disadvantage of being remote from Westminster and easily ignored. Painfully aware that they are a minority on this island, they want to avoid being taken over by the Irish Republic and ruled by a Catholic majority. They want their provincial government restored with Protestants controlling all the posts of power. And they want the British Army to smite their enemies, which means, at the moment, stamping out the violent Provisional Irish Republican Army, the cutting edge of Catholic militancy.

Westminster has no more love for the Provisionals than the Protestants have, but it is unwilling to use the same harsh methods the Paisleyites would use to stamp it out. As for restored provincial government, the British seem determined to force the Protestants to share power with the Catholic minority, before agreeing to a new Assembly at Belfast.

College Professors an Endangered Species?

dian Universities." It may lack Dr. Drucker's forthright and political style, but it lays bare the bones of the Canadian problem. That problem, on his findings, looks at least as bad as that of the U.S. system.

These are the salient points from his study:

• From 1963 to 1975, Canada's university student total soared from 155,781 to 403,589. The teacher total (full-time equivalent) rose from 9,983 to 37,428 and the student-teacher ratio went from 15.6 to 10.8.

• From 1967 to 1975, the median salary of a full-time full professor rose from $17,081 to $31,350; for an associate professor it rose from $12,998 to $22,850.

• The number of full-time students is likely to keep rising for the next few years, but in the decade of the 1980's will drop by 21.5 per cent.

• Because of the scramble to fill the enormous number of new jobs in the 1960s the average age of professors dropped sharply. Dr. Zur-Muehlen notes, only 14 per cent of Canadian faculty were over 50. In the U.S., the figure was 32.5 per cent.

The relative youth of today's professors means few new faculty will be hired, he says. "Thus, perhaps a whole generation of potential scholars who have recently completed their graduate training or are in the process of doing so will have limited opportunity to be employed at Canadian universities."

• At the same time, an increasing number of faculty members will become full or associate professors, with the consequence that university budgets will be considerably strained, and the cost per student, in constant dollars, is likely to increase."

Dr. von Zur-Muehlen quotes another writer as saying: "There is a definite danger that universities and research establishments may develop into communities of senior citizens..." And he quotes another as saying, more colorfully, of City University, New York: "The damned place is turning into a geriatric institution. You can't run an enterprise on senior citizens only, even if they manage to seniority is writing its own obituary."

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

Some of the trees around UVic are looking a little the worse for wear these days. The trouble seems to be thousands of little green caterpillars called span-worms.

According to entomologists there are lots of different kinds of span-worms, but what makes many of those involved in the work of denuding the trees at UVic different is that they're easterners that go under the name of Bruce's Span-worm.

Normally residents of eastern Canada that find their way as far west as southeastern British Columbia, Bruce's Span-worms have suddenly turned up on Vancouver Island and, from the look of the trees at UVIC—especially the willows—they're making the most of their stay.

The so-called "worms" themselves aren't easy to see, but the result of their efforts in half-leaved trees, partially eaten leaves and the tiny little clusters of twisted curled leaves, is

The caterpillars can best be found by opening one of these leaf clusters and exposing several of the little green worms inside. At the moment they're about half-an-inch long and about the thickness of a pencil lead.

If the span-worms limited their attention to willows, they'd probably be considered little more than a nuisance. But they don't: such popular fruit trees as apples are another favorite of the span-worms, and when they settle onto an apple tree the effects are three-fold and none of them pleasant. First, of course, will be the denuding of the tree as the worms eat the leaves; second will probably be no fruit or at best a small crop; and third will be their annoying habit of dropping, on slender silken threads, on to nearby vegetation, into cups of coffee—and, worst of all, into ladies' hair.

But, since I (and my apple tree) am safely ensconced in Colwood, far from the current outbreak of span-worms, I can look on their progress at UVIC with some detachment and, hopefully, academic interest, particularly in the effect their presence has on birds.

All you have to do is spend a few minutes around a tree infested by the span-worms and you'll find they are not alone; the birds are there too. And, in a beautiful example of energy flow, while the "worms" eat the leaves, the birds eat the worms. Inadvertently to be sure, the "worms" are recycling the sun's energy locked in those leaves and denied the birds in its present form, and releasing that energy in a form the birds can use, namely in the wriggling green bodies of the worms themselves.

The hatch of these larvae of inconspicuous little moths couldn't have come at a more opportune time for many kinds of birds, most notably chickadees and bushtits. Both these species—well-known for their large families—are busily engaged these days in providing for those families; and providing, in their case, means lots of little green wigglers like span-worms.

This timely bonanza is bound to have at least a local effect on the numbers of chickadees and bushtits next fall, because with a bountiful supply of span-worms more young will be raised. So, at least until the ravages of winter begin to take their toll, parts of Gordon Head should have a plethora of chickadees and bushtits next fall.

But, most migrating birds are getting in on the lode too. Most apparent among these are Audubon's Warblers, which are reaping their share as they move north. Also involved are Orange-crowned Warblers which, while they're probably nesting nearby, may not yet have hatched their eggs. Soon their young too will join in the feast.

With all this attention from the birds, one might think the supply of span-worms would not be up to the demand. Well, it's a little more complicated than that because it is seldom that birds—which are only one of a multitude of threats to the existence of the span-worms—can alone bring such an outbreak as that at UVIC under control.

Other factors are at work too: disease, other predators, parasites, weather—and maybe even psychological pressures within the "worms" themselves—will all combine to eventually bring them down.

The trouble is—from a purely human point of view—this process is too slow. We want quick action and, as a result, might be tempted to use drastic measures—measures that might bring a lot of chickadees, bushtits, Audubon's Warblers and Orange-crowned Warblers down with the span-worms.

The president of the Canadian Medical Association warned here Friday Canada is in danger of producing too many doctors and called for a halt in any expansion of medical schools.

His warning comes just as University of British Columbia's medical school enters a major expansion program—a program that has been solidly endorsed by the B.C. Medical Association, lower mainland hospital boards and Education Minister Pat McGeer.

Barry O'Donnell, speaking at the 77th annual meeting of the BCMA being held at the Empress said the 16 existing medical schools in Canada are "adequate to produce all the doctors we require."

O'Donnell, who was the keynote speaker at the three-day meeting which concluded today, said Canada is self-sufficient in terms of new doctors entering the profession—"We must not allow the profession" to get into surplus," he pleaded.

The 49-year-old Dublin pediatrician who is president also of both the Irish and British medical associations, said every developed country in the world with the possible exception of the United States is producing too many doctors and "it mustn't happen here."

MINISTERS LEAD PUFF-FREE WAY

The government's anti-smoking campaign, started last month with the release of a new brochure on smoking dangers, is working so well four cabinet ministers are trying to quit. Health Minister Bob McClelland said Friday.

McClelland did not name the ministers but Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawif and Labor Minister Allan Williams are believed among the number.

McClelland said each of the four has put up $300 and anyone who starts smoking again will forfeit his deposit to the others.

At the time the brochure, titled "Cigarettes and Your Health," was released, about half the 18 ministers in the cabinet were smokers.

Now the figure is about a quarter.

McClelland, speaking at the annual convention of the B.C. Medical Association, said the brochure has been received with "fantastic enthusiasm by the public."

We'll Talk, MDs Told

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Friday he has no intention of developing any solution to the province's medical manpower problem without first consulting the B.C. Medical Association.

McClelland made the remark after BCMA president Dr. Bill Jory said Thursday the government is considering imposing stiff financial disincentives to prevent areas of the province from becoming over-doctored.

The disincentives would in-

O'DONNELL

O'Donnell said medical schools have a "built-in tendency" to expand numbers without always taking into account what is happening in other schools.

"The practising profession must be involved in these expansionist decisions which should not be dominated by educationalists," he said.

"They can't be allowed to bypass, needs to meet demands."

O'Donnell said his remarks were his own and did not necessarily represent the views of the CMA.

McGeer reacted sharply to O'Donnell's statement.

"That kind of message has a hollow ring to it," McGeer said Friday in an interview from Vancouver.

"There could hardly be another place in the western world where that message is more inappropriate than here."

McGeer said there is a pressing need to expand medical education facilities in the province.

"Medical education is the greatest disgrace we have in B.C.," the minister said.

"We train the lowest number of doctors per capita than any other province by far. The next worst to others will give students two and a half times the opportunity to enter medical school than we do here."

At present, McGeer said, only 15 per cent of the doctors in the province are B.C.-trained.

With the expansion of the UBC medical school the percentage will double, McGeer said.

The $50 million expansion program is just getting underway and involves construction of a new 243-bed acute-care training hospital and a doubling of enrolment in the medical school to 160 by 1982.

Eventually, McGeer said, he would like to see the majority of doctors B.C.-trained and for that reason will continue to press for a second medical school in the province located at University of Victoria.

"It's time our youngsters got a break," he said. "Why shouldn't they have more opportunity to become doctors."

"They have a far greater endowment in and a far deeper understanding of the people of B.C. than those we're bringing in from outside."

McGeer said of the 478 new doctors registered in the province last year only 79 were from B.C. while 100 came from Britain.

"It's wrong that people from the U.K. should have a greater chance of practising medicine here than people from B.C."

He said his aim to increase the number of medical graduates is "vigorously fought by the vested interests."

McGeer took exception to O'Donnell's suggestion that the practising profession is not involved in medical education decisions.

He noted the BCMA is, in fact, a member of the task force that recommended the UBC expansion to the government last October.

O'Donnell in his speech gave a veiled threat that the practising profession would not tolerate a surplus of doctors.

"The practising profession has the ultimate sanction of a closed shop," he said.

McGeer, however, countered by pointing out all physicians are licensed here under statute of the B.C. Legislature.

COURT BAN REMAINS

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Lee Oates, the senior probation officer barred from juvenile court Tuesday, has not been allowed to return.

Provincial Court Judge E. J. Cronin barred Oates after reading a letter in court that Oates had written to Prince George regional corrections officer Jim Graham. Oates had asked Graham to talk to the judge regarding clashes between the two men in and out of court.

Both Oates and Judge Cronin have refused to comment on the incident.

Brian Mailan, northwest regional corrections superintendent, talked with Cronin and said in a telephone interview from Terrace Friday that the problem is an internal matter and will be handled within the corrections department.

Mailan said the altercation could be described as a personality clash but added there are other things involved on which he would not elaborate.

Mailan will prepare a report for Graham and said he hopes the issue will be resolved next week.

Drive the route of the Haidas Along British Columbia's Inside Passage

Long before the first white man sailed the "Inside Passage" it was a water highway for the adventurous Haidas. Today, nature is still untamed in this magnificent region. Ships and people are dwarfed by snow capped peaks and silent fjords. To see it in comfort, drive aboard our modern ferry-liner, the "Queen of Prince Rupert", enjoy good food and accommodation (at a reasonable cost), then drive ashore and explore the vastness of British Columbia.

Independent and escorted tours by Bus and Ferry are available through your travel agent or automobile club.

Let us send you a colourful "Queen of Prince Rupert" rates and schedule brochure. Write to:

Repairs Set For B.C. Pen

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Penitentiary Service announced Friday that the east wing of the British Columbia Penitentiary will be partially restored.

Jack Stewart, penitentiary service information officer, said the public works department has been authorized to proceed with drawings and specifications for repairs to the wing, wrecked by rioting prisoners last September.

He said plans call for reconstruction of 96 cells on the first two levels of the wing, slightly less than half the cells that existed before the riot. The non-renovated parts of the wing will remain sealed off, Stewart said.

The rebuilding job includes provision for showers on each tier of the wing and for hot water to each cell, neither of which was available in the wing before.

"This project will increase the penitentiary's cell capacity to 412 (compared with 316 since the riot) and relieve the present shortage of maximum security accommodation in B.C.," Stewart said. Work is expected to start by mid-July and finish by the end of the year.

Stewart said the decision to go ahead with partial restoration does not mean the service has abandoned plans to phase out the out-dated prison.

He did confirm that phase-out plans remain vague and said that even if it is phased out, the service still will require a reception centre in the south coast region and "we haven't yet been able to find a community willing to accept a reception centre," so the present penitentiary could become a reception centre only, with capacity for 70 to 110 prisoners, he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Andrew Thompson, head of the Kitimat oil port inquiry will confer with two federal cabinet ministers in Ottawa Tuesday on the question of whether funds are to be provided to assist groups in making submissions to the inquiry.

Thompson will meet Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo Leblanc and Transport Minister Otto Lang to discuss the issue. In preliminary session of his inquiry, environmental groups have said they should receive funds to enable them to do the studies necessary for them to refuse to release makes them

"Perhaps having access to public information which they refuse to release makes them

Wildlife View Rapped

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Arthur Downs, the retiring president of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation, Thursday accused the provincial government of withholding information and being too sympathetic to despilers of wildlife resources.

Downs congratulated Highways Minister Alex Fraser for his decision not to build the Lardeau bridge and to construct a bypass highway instead.

The Lardeau is the sole remaining "spawning ground for a species of giant trout.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR CARRYING RIFLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — James Craig Bowman, 25, who carried a loaded rifle in his car because his life had been threatened several times, was granted a suspended sentence in provincial court but had his rifle confiscated.

"Mr. Bowman is a witness in a murder trial in Nanaimo and he has been threatened by a man out on bail," defence lawyer Howard Bradbrook told Judge Alfred Watts on Thursday.

"He is a nervous man."

Bowman was shot in the face and shoulder last June and is scheduled to go into hospital shortly for necessary surgery, Bradbrook said.

Bowman pleaded guilty to possession of the rifle and driving with a blood alcohol reading over .08. He was fined $75 on the impaired charge.

Feed Freight Subsidy Back

The federal government has reinstated a $4-a-ton feed freight subsidy for B.C. poultry farmers, B.C. Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said today.

Hewitt said the agreement was worked out Wednesday at a meeting in Ottawa of provincial agriculture ministers and federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

The subsidy was removed last year for an unexplained reason Hewitt said.

The subsidy should eventually lower consumer prices for turkeys, chickens and broilers.

The minister also said federal studies on a 25 cent per hundred weight milk levy will continue.

Several provinces, including B.C., objected to the imposition of the levy on fluid milk producers.

The provinces claim jurisdiction over the levy and want to be responsible for both collection and method of its collection.

The levy, imposed to cover a shortfall in the export price of milk, was to have been effective April 1, but has been delayed because of provincial objections.

Frank Ney said the development announcement is "the best news Nanaimo has had since Harmac (pulp mill) went ahead 25 years ago."

"This will mean more jobs and taxes," he said. "The city will give its 100 per cent cooperation in getting it started as quickly as possible."

Joe Tofini, a local businessman, said the project is a high priority in his department and meetings will be held with interested groups in the province.

Pawlak testified Thursday that she went to Joe's home, where the meeting was held, to help look after their ailing mother.

She said that, while Tofini was downstairs talking to her brothers, her mother suggested she give the guest a cake from their refrigerator.

"She said, 'Make sure when she goes home you give her the cake for her family and children,'" Pawlak said.

She said that when she went downstairs to say goodbye to Tofini, she told Joe of their mother's wishes and he put the cake in a bag. She added she did not see him add butter to the bag.

Joe testified earlier that he added a bottle of scotch and one of gin because Tofini had said those were her favorite drinks.

"Nobody walked through that house that my mother wouldn't give them something," said Pawlak.

Nobody could be influenced or corrupted by two bottles of liquor and a cake, argued Chamberlain.

McCarthy Known — Nielsen

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Friday he was aware of the proposed budworm spray program in the Fraser Canyon before the public announcement was made by Forest Minister Tom Waterland.

Asked if he raised any objection, Nielsen said in an interview that it was a case of objection because the matter was worked out through an inter-ministerial pesticide committee, which also will be responsible for monitoring the program.

He said he did not know which ministries are represented on the committee or who would be doing the monitoring.

Nielsen said a great deal of impact by the environment ministry was involved in Waterland's final decision.

The decision to spray only half of the original 100,000 acres was made after a two-day seminar on the issue, held after Waterland and his advisers ran into protests from residents of Fraser Canyon communities that chemicals might be hazardous to health and the environment.

Nielsen, asked why his ministry was not represented at the seminar, said he was involved in recommending that certain people attend, such as Dr. Corland Mackenzie, former chairman of a royal commission into herbicides and pesticides.

He also said authority for use of the herbicides and pesticides had just been transferred to his ministry from the agriculture ministry, and that his ministry would monitor the spray program through the inter-ministerial committee.

McCarthy Seeks Centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Friday she will try to sell the idea of building a convention centre in Vancouver to her provincial cabinet colleagues.

She said, in an interview that building the convention centre is not a government priority but it is a priority in her own ministry.

McCarthy said members of her ministry are compiling convention trade statistics to back up her argument.

A convention centre will be on the agenda, when provincial and civic officials get together for a meeting requested by Mayor Jack Voie, she said. No date has been set for the meeting.

Cost of a convention centre, which would accommodate at least 1,200 conventioners, has been estimated at $30 million. McCarthy said the cost should be borne by federal, provincial and civic governments.

BRIBERY CASE DROPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown counsel Roy Jaques dropped his bribery case Thursday against Penthouse Cabaret director Florence Pawlak.

Jaques told Vancouver County Court Judge John Spencer that he will not ask him to find Pawlak guilty on charges of attempting to bribe Pia Tofini, a member of the British Columbia Liquor Board.

He made the statement after Pawlak said the board member was given part of the alleged bribe, a cake, on the mother's orders.

The bribery charges stem from a March, 1976 meeting between Pawlak and her brothers, Joe Phillipone and Ross Phillipone, and Tofini.

Joe and Ross are brothers although they spell their last name differently.

The defendants admit that at the end of that meeting, Pawlak was given a paper bag containing the cake and two 26-ounce bottles of liquor.

The Crown also alleges that Joe offered Tofini an increase in business for a travel agency she owns and Phillipone has denied he ever made such an offer.

Pawlak testified Thursday that she went to Joe's home, where the meeting was held, to help look after their ailing mother.

She said that, while Tofini was downstairs talking to her brothers, her mother suggested she give the guest a cake from their refrigerator.

"She said, 'Make sure when she goes home you give her the cake for her family and children,'" Pawlak said.

MSA Eyes Pharmacare Blend

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's two major health insurance plans are investigating methods of providing increased service to complement the provincial governments universal pharmacare plan, spokesmen for the organizations said Friday.

"Once we have received full details of the plan we will review our coverage and see how we can adjust to the provincial plan," said John Seney of the Medical Services Association.

Seney said MSA covers an estimated 700,000 British Columbians' drug costs under its extended health care plan.

The plan has a $25 deductible clause, after which MSA pays 80 per cent of all prescription drug costs.

The provincial government plan announced Thursday by Premier Bill Bennett has a $100 deductible clause and the same 80-per-cent payout.

"We just don't know how the government intends to apply its regulations to see that an applicant doesn't claim twice," Cotter said.

"We haven't been the details of the plan, but we've scheduled meetings to take place as soon as we have something to work with."

Cotter said CU and C had a small plan, covering about 11,000 persons, which provided 100 per cent drug coverage.

The society's main plan, covering about 460,000 persons, provides a $25 deductible, 80-per-cent paycheck coverage which now provides out-of-province coverage.

Ted Cotter of CU and C Health Services said his society's main concern was how to administer the new public plan and the existing private plans so that double payments did not occur.

Ted Cotter of CU and C Health Services said his society's main concern was how to administer the new public plan and the existing private plans so that double payments did not occur.

"We just don't know how the government intends to apply its regulations to see that an applicant doesn't claim twice," Cotter said.

"We haven't been the details of the plan, but we've scheduled meetings to take place as soon as we have something to work with."

Cotter said CU and C had a small plan, covering about 11,000 persons, which provided 100 per cent drug coverage.

The society's main plan, covering about 460,000 persons, provides a $25 deductible, 80-per-cent paycheck coverage which now provides out-of-province coverage.

Intent Unproven, Jury Finds

A county court jury deliberated only 20 minutes Friday before finding a 19-year-old soldier not guilty of breaking and entering with intent.

Richard Stanley Watt, of Work Point Barracks, was accused of breaking and entering Oct. 7 at 1409 Government with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Court was told that Watt was found in the early hours in a vacant third floor room in the building after the occupant, who lives on the second floor, was awakened by a loud noise.

Watt said he had been drinking with other soldiers earlier and went downtown alone.

He said he was wandering around and "got a bit lost" and was feeling the effects of the drinks.

He said he didn't know how it happened but he found himself on the roof of the building "looking at the lights of the city."

He had a cigarette and "I must have passed out" and when he awoke was concerned that he had to be back at the barracks by 5 a.m.

He couldn't find a way down but saw a skylight, opened it and dropped into an empty and dark room, hurting his knee.

Other witnesses told court the drop was between 15 and

He said he had no intent to commit an indictable offence but was simply trying to get off the roof and back to barracks.

Defence counsel Gordon MacDonald told the jury there was no evidence of intent but Crown counsel Robert Johnston said Watt's evidence wasn't really believable and was "simply incredible."

Judge Leslie Cashman said the real question for the jury to decide was whether there was an intent to commit an indictable offence. He said drunkenness is not a defence but may be considered with other elements in the case as to whether there was an intent.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 26-year-old woman who pleaded guilty Friday in Victoria provincial court to possession of six stolen credit cards and the use of one of them was handed a six-month prison sentence by Judge Blake Allan.

Carol Marie George, of 2550 Shelbourne, was also placed on 18 months probation, ordered not to associate with known drug users and to report to a probation officer for urinalysis as required.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Mrs. George was arrested just before noon Tuesday at the Town and Country shopping centre with the credit cards taken from a wallet.

Mulligan said Mrs. George used one of the cards Monday to purchase $2,57 worth of merchandise from Kinney Shoes, 514 Shelbourne.

Court was also informed earlier in the week that she was placed on a year's probation Feb. 1 after conviction on five counts of false pretences and was on $1,000 bail after being charged May 4 with the illegal use of a credit card.

Jasper Bomhof, the third lawyer to appear for Mrs.

George this week, told Allan his client had a problem with minor drug use and had temporarily given up her two small children voluntarily because of it.

Nicholas Lott and Douglas Christie acted as defence counsel for her before Bom-

Allan handed out concurrent, six-months terms on the two guilty pleas.

The unusual condition that a person refrain from any communication with anyone at or employed by the Saanich police "without lawful excuse" was added to terms of bail for a 28-year-old Esquimalt man.

Arthur Longley, of 637 Pine, is charged with three counts of making threatening phone calls April 21. The charges allege a threat to the life of or injury to a man and a woman who are or were connected with the Saanich police and a threat of damage to a Saanich police vehicle on that date.

Mulligan asked for the inclusion of the unusual condition because of the nature of the charges.

Allan ordered Longley's release on bail on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 but added that $200 of it must be a cash deposit.

Longley was remanded until next Thursday for election of trial method.

A preliminary hearing date of June 20 has been set for a 33-year-old man charged with four counts of gross indecency.

Gary Smith Larson, of 729 Violet, is charged in connection with an April 23 incident in Saanich involving two young girls.

He elected trial by judge without jury, was denied bail and was ordered to undergo psychiatric examination.

Thomas Philip Henry, 20, of 8923 West Saanich Road, was fined $100 after pleading guilty to having a blood-alcohol content over .08 April 16 in Surrey.

In addition to the small fine, Henry was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

MLA Joins Protest

SEATTLE (AP) — A British Columbia MLA here for a protest against the navy's Trident nuclear submarine base, says the building of Trident constitutes planning for a war of aggression.

Robert Skelly (NDP-Alberni) said Friday that neither Canada nor the British Columbia provincial government has objected to the base under construction at Bangor on Washington's Hood Canal.

Noting that a Canadian government-owned corporation has taken a navy contract to build missile-loading cranes for the Trident base, Skelly said, "It's done because Canada has a terrible balance of payments problem caused by payment for American equipment used by our armed forces."

Skelly, the NDP's environmental spokesman, said: "Our party feels that anything capable of blowing up the world is bad for the environment."

He was in Seattle for Trident Concern Week, a series of protests in Seattle and at Bangor sponsored by a dozen political and religious peace groups.

AEC'S SAFE N-FUEL 'A LIE'

FREDRICKTON (CP) — A Concordia University professor said Friday that officials of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. are lying when they say the production of nuclear energy can be made safe.

Dr. Fred Kneiman, a chemical engineer and professor of science and human affairs, told a meeting at the Alternative Energy Fair that "no reputable nuclear engineer outside Canada would say the problem of handling nuclear waste has been solved."

He said there is inconvertible evidence that Canada can maintain its standard of living between now and 2000 without nuclear energy.

In the meantime the government should be funneling its resources into research on alternate energy forms.

He said officials of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., the government's nuclear research and development agency, have said it is safe to re-process nuclear fuel when in fact this is not true.

He said one-millionth of a gram of plutonium waste produced during nuclear fission can cause cancer and is impossible to reprocess safely.

Separate Western Inuit Claim No Major Problem: Allmand

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Friday he sees no great barrier to establishing a separate Inuit territory in the Western Arctic.

"We agreed to a regional government in the James Bay settlement," he told a news conference after the Committee for the Original Peoples' Entitlement (COPE) presented their land claims.

A cornerstone of the claim was the request for a 105,000-square-mile Inuit territory — more than twice the size of the three Maritime provinces.

Within the territory, the 2,500 Inuit are seeking government powers over such fields as education, police, economic development and game. There are less than 200 whites in the proposed territory.

Allmand said the federal government has agreed to much the same concept of regional government for native people in James Bay where the first major modern-day treaty was signed.

The minister said later in an interview that the Northwest Territories, which covers 1.5 million square miles, could easily be broken up into several territories. The N.W.T. population of about 42,000 people is widely scattered.

"I see no great obstacle to an Inuit territory so long as it isn't based along racial lines," he said.

The minister also told reporters the other major Inuit request for three per cent of royalties for oil and gas produced in the Western Arctic also followed along lines of the James Bay settlement.

There would be negotiations on the amount of royalties, whether it should be three per cent or less. But the idea was acceptable.

Sam Radi, president of COPE, asked that the government agree in principle to the land claims before a decision is made on the Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline. That decision is expected before September.

Allmand replied that the government could meet that deadline and added it would be desirable to do so. But first the claims must be examined to see if any disagreements might arise.

In addition to the COPE claim over the Western Arctic, the government is awaiting land claims from the Dene Indians along the Mackenzie Valley and from Inuit in the Central and Eastern Arctic.

Originally, Inuit Tapirat Eskimo Brotherhood and COPE had planned to present one claim covering the entire Arctic and its 15,000 original people.

But more time was needed to research claims in the Central and Eastern Arctic and COPE felt the intense oil and gas activity in the Western Arctic made it necessary for them to act quickly in their claims.

In a letter addressed to Prime Minister Trudeau accompanying its claim, COPE said it believes the government will approve a Mackenzie Valley route for the gas pipeline. COPE said it opposes the route because "as Canadians, we do not think it is worth the social, environmental and financial costs."

But it was imperative that their land claims be before government before the pipeline is started.

The consequence of a pipeline will be a tremendous acceleration of destructive social and environmental impacts that will be borne by the Inuvialuit (Eskimo) for generations."

Most Favor Pen

SELKIRK, Man. (CP) — Residents of this town, about 20 miles northeast of Winnipeg, have voted almost two-to-one in favor of a federal penitentiary being built in the community. Of a possible 6,300 voters, 1,711 voted in favor of the prison, while 1,000 voted against it. There were 10 spoiled ballots.

MacEachen said Robertson was voicing his own personal views, not speaking for the government. However, he said "the speech could be read with profit by all... Mr. Robertson is one of the most knowledgeable and experienced men in this field. It is excellent that should have spoken out and given us his views on this question."

A large section of the northern Quebec hinterland was federal territory until it was turned over to Quebec by act of Parliament in 1912. Robertson suggested this part of Quebec would have to be taken back by Ottawa if Quebec ever decided to separate.

"In most parts of it there are still very few French speaking Canadians — most are Indian and Inuit. English is the common language.

James Bay Languages Upheld

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will withhold ratification of a James Bay land agreement between the Quebec government and northern Quebec natives if native language rights are jeopardized, Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said today.

The agreement between Quebec and the natives, ceding lands used for the James Bay hydro electric power development, is subject to ratification by the federal Parliament because Ottawa is responsible for Indian and Eskimo rights under the constitution.

Ratifying legislation has been passed by the Commons and now is before the Senate. Allmand said proclamation of the legislation will be withheld if federal lawyers find that Quebec language legislation, giving priority to French, limits native languages.

The Cree and Inuit of northern Quebec have expressed concern that the Parti Quebecois government's proposed language legislation will infringe on native rights to speak Cree, English and Inuktitut.

Allmand said in the Commons he has discussed the matter with Andrew Delisle of the Quebec Indian Association.

In addition, Billy Diamond, grand chief of the Grand Council of Crees, told him he cannot accept legislation that would be contrary to native rights, "and I intend to support him on that."

Admiral's Firing Denied by Danson

OTTAWA (CP) — Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle said Friday that he was asked to resign as commander of the navy by military brass but there could have been a misunderstanding.

Earlier in the day, Defence Minister Barney Danson denied Progressive Conservative allegations in the Commons that the controversial admiral was fired and that Admiral Boyle was offered a new job.

After an hour-long meeting with Danson, Boyle told reporters he will rethink the job offer and that Danson had promised to investigate the alleged misunderstanding.

Boyle would not say why or

FORD CANADA 2 Years Later... Quang Stays FACES TRIAL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ford Motor Co. of Canada was ordered Friday to stand trial on a charge that it failed to notify owners of 1971-73 full-sized Fords of a possible defect in the steering assembly that might affect safe operation of the vehicle.

The order was made by provincial court judge Robert Hutton at the end of a five-day preliminary hearing on the charge, laid under the federal Motor Vehicle Safety Act.

Hutton, after hearing testimony from more than 20 witnesses, said it was clear there was enough evidence to order the trial.

The judge earlier this week ordered a ban on publication of evidence presented during the hearing at the request of Ford counsel, J. F. Howard.

The Criminal Code permits an order banning publication of evidence in order not to prejudice chances of an accused getting a fair hearing in any trial that might result.

Hutton, in making the committal to trial, altered the terms of the charge which originally said Ford had failed to notify owners of 1965-73 vehicles of a possible defect. The section under which the company was charged did not come into effect until January, 1971.

Maximum penalty upon conviction under the section is a fine of $10,000.

The charge against Ford, the first of its kind under the Motor Vehicle Safety Act, was laid by the federal transport

Martin New Pacific Commander

The defence department Friday announced Commodore Michael A. Martin of Calgary will take over as commander of maritime command Pacific.

The commodore replaces Rear Admiral Andrew Collier, who will be promoted to vice-admiral and take over as chief of maritime command, based in Halifax.

Martin, now a senior maritime liaison officer with the Canadian defence liaison in Washington, D.C., will be promoted to the rank of rear-admiral June 15.

He will assume his duties at Esquimalt this summer.

Collier will succeed retiring Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle in Halifax. (For Boyle story see Page 14).

military officials, won't accept him as a refugee.

Apparently, military leaders in the U.S. were anxious to have Quang in the country because of his detailed knowledge of American involvement in Vietnam.

But his chances of acceptance in the U.S. remain bleak.

I haven't heard anything about Quang in months and months, said U.S. Consul official Robert Maule.

The last I heard about him was when he tried to get labor certification to work in the U.S.

He was referring to the time when in mid-July, 1975, Quang applied for permanent resident status in the States for himself and his family. He was being aided then by Sam Jaffee, a Los Angeles industrialist who heads Stalex International.

Jaffee said at the time that before any problem occurred, a tightening or stiffening of the steering would be noticed.

But transport department accident investigators say the problem represents "an unreasonable risk to the owner" and has advised owners of full-sized Fords of model year 1973 and earlier to have their steering assembly checked for corrosion.

But Jaffee said that Quang had been working in Montreal but that the former general wasn't entirely satisfied with his work. "He feels if he was more acceptable, he could find a better position and earn more pay."

Apparently, Mrs. Quang has worked to help support her family.

Nobody seems to know, except Quang himself, how much money he was able to bring with him to Canada, under his name or through different channels.

Jaffee said Quang has not been "harrassed for some time now," and asks that he be left alone. "Let sleeping dogs lie, let him live peacefully."

How long Quang remains in Canada is basically up to him and his lawyer.

An inquiry earlier this year by the immigration department showed there wasn't much hope the U.S. will ever take him, said department spokesman Errington.

"Until such time as he finds another country to take him, he's stuck here."

Service Drunks Now No Longer 'Hidden Away'

There was a time in the Canadian navy when if a sailor got drunk his shipmates would hide him away until he sobered up.

Those days are gone.

The Canadian armed forces recognizes alcohol as one of its major source of problems, far more serious than drugs.

Now, rather than let a man drink himself onto "civvy street" before his time, treatment centres here and in Halifax are grappling with the problem.

Major Ray Crabbe, director of the Base Alcoholism Rehabilitation Service in CFB Esquimalt, explains, "In the old days it was swept under the carpet. Their shipmates would hide them but now we have the minimum number of staff to do a job... We don't have that sponge factor any longer."

He estimates the Pacific command has more than 325 actual or potential alcoholics, more than 1,000 that drink alcohol in harmful quantities, and that about $500,000 per year is lost in decreased efficiency, poor decisions and absenteeism.

Crabbe reports senior naval officials here and in Halifax are very much aware of the problem and enthusiastic about the BARS program.

There are three ways a man can be admitted to the BARS program.

He can volunteer, his commanding officer, by referring him to a medical doctor, can have the man voluntarily take the program, or he can be admitted through an administrative order.

Crabbe describes the BARS program as "a multi-discipline approach in which all base and community resources are brought together to help those with a drinking problem, to help themselves recover."

He, himself, has been involved with fighting alcoholism for the past seven years but reports that BARS

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

only began "getting away from coffee - slacking sessions three years ago."

He sees alcoholism as Canada's major health problem and says servicemen are particularly prone because of the "facilitating environment."

The BARS treatment program lasts for 13 months.

The first 28 days are spent at the base's hospital where a team of professionals including three counsellors who have taken alcoholism treatment specialist courses, help the man and his family.

The days are long, ending at 10 p.m. and parts of the program are regular visits to

Alcoholics Anonymous for the man, counselling, films, exercise and self-assessments.

On completion of the 28-day period those on the BARS course are sent back to their ship or unit.

"We use the buddy system, we marry them to someone. They must report to us regularly, at the minimum weekly, and some almost every day," he explains.

He estimates the BARS program helps about 80 people per year.

Graduates are encouraged to join AA on completion of the 13-month period.

Crabbe says the BARS program "is not the big brother attitude... it's caring and being concerned."

Crabbe says becoming addicted to alcohol can take anywhere from 10 to 15 years "but you don't have to hit bottom to get treatment."

He adds, "Basically, it's good business to try and keep a man who has given 10 to 15 years of his life to the military."

Crabbe says credit for the establishment of the BARS program goes mainly to Capt. Peter Hilton, the former base commander, now retired.

"He was the champion, he pushed to get it going," Crabbe reports. "Above all else, he saw the need and gave us all the resources. Without him we would not be where we are today."

The actions of two city police in an assault case were described as "somewhat extraordinary" Friday by Judge Leslie Cashman of Saanich County Court.

He was commenting on the case of Lawrence Huth, 24, a prison guard, who was found not guilty by a jury Thursday of assaulting Const. William Coleman Nov. 7 in an incident in an apartment parking lot.

"There seemed to be a considerable amount of quite unnecessary violence ensued in this case," said Cashman, adding that "I may be wrong" and that "I am not being critical of police."

He said "it might bear some further investigation" and asked Crown counsel Robert Johnston to consider in his report drawing the testimony of Const. Coleman and his partner, Const. Charles Bates, to the attorney-general's attention.

Coleman and Bates said Huth did strike Coleman, but Huth denied this and said he was pushed, shoved, punched and choked into unconsciousness, awaking in a city police cell.

Medical testimony showed Huth suffered bruises and abrasions and injuries "consistent with heavy blows and severe choking pressure around the neck," Coleman said. Bates had Huth in a headlock but Bates said he didn't recall choking Huth and denied choking him unconscious.

Johnston said he will draw the policeman's testimony to the attention of the attorney-general but he told Cashman the policemen "felt they were facing an unknown situation and I suggest what they did was not entirely unreasonable until they got the two ladies out of (Huth's) car and (found) there was no possible danger of or violence from the jury. "Regrettably, I can't find the jury verdict appropriate," he said of the dangerous driving conviction.

Cashman made his comments after granting Huth an absolute discharge on the jury's conviction for dangerous driving.

He added that this was the first time he has had occasion to openly disagree with a jury.

Then he said that it was "appropriate" to direct that Huth be given an absolute discharge.

Huth was represented in court by Dermot Owen-Flood.

Friday, Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said there would be no department inquiry into the affair.

"It was Huth, not our men, who were on trial," Gregory said.

Government Proposes Bargaining Changes

The Government Employee Relations Bureau has proposed substantial changes to the public service employees' bargaining structure, a union spokesman said Friday.

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C.-Government Employees' Union, said the bureau made the proposals Thursday, the first day of negotiations for a new master agreement between the B.C. government and the 33,000 employees.

"I would say that the proposals, if accepted, would result in significant changes to the structure that we have," Fryer said.

However, he said, he is hopeful both sides will be able to reach agreement on the matter and it will not amount to a major stumbling block.

Fryer said Thursday was taken up with discussion about the bargaining structure and a timetable for negotiations for the master agreement and 11 component agreements.

He said neither side laid out proposals for the new contract.

The BCGEU will hold a bargaining conference June 10 to put the finishing touches to its contract package, he said.

Richard Higgins, a senior civil servant, was appointed in January to conduct review of the Public Service Labor Relations Act.

Higgins prepared a report in 1972 which was the basis for the legislation granting public service employees collective bargaining rights.

Davison has said in the past that he dislikes the existing two-tiered system of bargaining — hammering out a master agreement and then separate contracts for each component.

On a related matter, Fryer said he has heard nothing about recommendations submitted to the government for changing the public service collective bargaining system.

The BCGEU will hold a bargaining conference June 10 to put the finishing touches to its contract package, he said.

Mike Davison, negotiator for the government, said the bureau will place its proposals on the table at the next bargaining meeting.

He would not comment on the bureau's proposed structural changes.

OFFICERS HONORED

Long service awards have been presented to four Saanich police officers at a ceremony held at the Saanich municipal hall.

Sgt. William Chisholm received an award for 25 years of police work. He was with the RCMP from 1951 to 1953 and the Calgary police from 1953 to 1960 before joining the Saanich force on June 1, 1963.

Sgt. Raymond McLean, who completed 20 years service in October last year, served with the RCMP from 1951 to 1957 before joining Saanich on Feb. 15, 1965.

Cpl. Edward Hernblad, also with 20 years service, started in 1955 in the Regina police force. He joined the Saanich force on Feb. 15, 1965.

Deputy Chief Eric Avison completed 20 years of service with the Saanich police department this year, having joined the force on Nov. 4, 1957.

The government's "wait-and-see attitude" makes it impossible for Camosun to do decent planning, Camosun College council chairman Janet Baird said.

She said the college meanwhile is an "illegitimate child."

"We were told the College Act would make us respectable members of the family so that we could borrow in our own right, own our own buildings, and not always have to take someone else's castoffs."

The college's Lansdowne campus is leased from University of Victoria, and the Mount View School campus, where the college wants to expand, is leased from the school district.

Mrs. Baird said the education ministry doesn't want to sink capital funds into something else's buildings.

As well as upgrading Lansdowne and Mount View, the college has a $10 million capital renovation and construction proposal it has been sitting on for months.

The long-delayed College Act should be introduced when the legislature resumes, probably in June. After it is enacted, Camosun will be able to borrow funds on its own.

Meanwhile any hope of getting its facilities upgraded by September has vanished.

The further delay may prove worrisome for college officials.

$22 million in an effort to get government approval.

The main thrust of the reduced plan is to consolidate the seven scattered campuses to three major ones at Lansdowne, Interurban and Mount View.

Boy 'Fair'

An 11-year-old Saanich boy is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today after being knocked from his bicycle by a car on Cedar Hill Cross Road Friday.

Saanich police said Colin Boerkamp, of 3941 Lasalle, was riding on the sidewalk when he suddenly swerved onto the street and into the path of a car driven by Lachlan MacMillan, 67, of 4060 Cedar Hill Cross Rd.

Malahat Patrol Faces Cash Crisis

This Year Could Be Last

RCMP felt it was such a good example of community spirit, it would be good if the club could keep it up every weekend throughout the year.

"We tried it for one year but it became too much," says Don.

They cut it back to 16 weeks

turn in supplying his own vehicle for the runs.

To join the Juan de Fuca CB Radio Club and pay your first year's membership it costs you $10. After that it's $3 a year. But that money barely runs the club. None of it goes toward financing the Malahat Patrol.

"All of that, the gas, oil, wear and tear on the vehicles which range from heavy four-wheel-drive trucks to Volkswagen Beetles, is the individual member's responsibility," points out Gordon. "And each car does about 125 miles at least during its four-hour shift."

The club, which also backs

the police in other community work such as searching in the bush for missing hunters and children and providing marine rescue assistance, has tried to get financial help to keep the Malahat Patrol going.

"We tried to get an LIP grant," explains Don. "But the conditions is that you must provide employment for someone who has no job. So that's out. We've approached the Department of Travel and Tourism and the BCAA and we were turned down by both. The BCAA told us it already provides a similar service for its members."

"Some of our members are on fixed incomes and with talk of gas going up to $1 a gallon by summer, we just can't afford it any longer," says Gordon. "And he adds with wistful sadness:

"We've given help to people ka and Florida so the club and its work are known the length and breadth of North America... it's a pity."

Absolute discharge means it is deemed not to be a conviction under the Criminal Code.

Huth had been accused of criminal negligence in the operation of his car, but the jury reduced this to the lesser included offence of dangerous driving.

Cashman, however, disagreed with the driving charge.

He said the jury faced two conflicting accounts, one from the police and the other from Huth and two friends, on both the criminal negligence allegation and the assault allegation.

Cashman said he couldn't reconcile the two verdicts of the jury. "Regrettably, I can't find the jury verdict appropriate," he said of the dangerous driving conviction.

He added that this was the first time he has had occasion to openly disagree with a jury.

Then he said that it was "appropriate" to direct that Huth be given an absolute discharge.

"There was an incredible feeling of anti-Oriental prejudice there before the war," said Kobayashi, who was born in Vancouver and interned fol-

tack in 1941.

Like thousands of others,

Takahara and Kobayashi said they are proud to be Canadians and have been accepted by the communities in which they live.

"You had to have a job," recalled Kobayashi, who set-led in Montreal in 1946.

Kobayashi now is the proprietor of an industrial consultant firm here.

"Today, we enjoy all the privileges of the full-fledged citizen of Canada. Being born here, we shouldn't have had to earn it—but we had to and we feel we have proved that "we are as Canadian as anybody."

Obata, president of the Japa-neese Canadian Centennial Society, said in a recent speech in Toronto:

"What we have achieved in becoming accepted members of the communities in which we reside is even more important than the black cloud of our wartime mistreatment.

"Today, we enjoy all the NAIROBI (Reuters) — The Ugandan government is ordering soldiers to "respect the law but some northern towns are still virtually deserted after a long purge by government agents of northern tribes following a coup scare last January.

For some weeks now the government radio, monitored here, has been telling soldiers to be law-abiding, obey the courts and leave innocent people alone.

Thousands of people, who fled to the bush in February and March as President Idi Amin's security men combed northern towns to seize and kill suspected plotters, have been urged to return to their homes.

But when Vice-President Mustafa Adrisi visited the big northern town of Gulu recently he found shops, offices and schools closed and nearby farms looted and abandoned, said a Gulu religious leader who has just fled to Kenya.

Adrisi was told that the people were afraid to return and were particularly frightened of a man called Festus Ojiga who had headed the Gulu department of the gun-carrying State Research Bureau since Amin came to power six years ago.

The vice-president ordered Ojiga's arrest and he has not been seen since, said the religious leader.

But the rule of the gun has become so widespread that additional measures are needed if the rule of law is to return and people are to get back to business, education and farming, he said.

A top civil servant in one of the ministries in Kampala has just fled into exile in Nairobi after visiting northern Uganda and discovered that his large farm is in economic ruins because soldiers drove away his wife and children and the workers and stole crops and machines.

The type of incident that happened in the town near his farm is persuading many people that it is better to be penniless in Kenya or to camp in the bush than to live in a town in Uganda.

He said a group of soldiers in uniform drove up to the office of the county chief and demanded the contents of his safe—the town's income tax contributions for the month.

When he refused he was shot down in front of his office. The soldiers hauled the safe into their vehicle and drove off.

A vicious circle develops in Uganda as the normal commercial networks of transport and communications break down, said Kampala-based diplomats visiting Nairobi, refugees and recent visitors to Uganda.

Economic activity stagnates and prices soar to the point where the temptation to steal becomes too great for many soldiers.

A bar of soap in Kampala now costs 40 Ugandan shillings (about $5). Housewives begin queuing for meat well-before dawn and still sometimes go home empty-handed.

The officer corps is shielded from much of this by high salaries and regular handouts of clothes, whisky, wrist watches, sunglasses and other goods which are brought from Britain once a week by an Uganda Airlines plane piloted by Americans.

With the collapse of the value of the Ugandan shilling and the gradual disintegration of local government, bartending is becoming widespread and many officers have gone into business, the sources said.

High coffee prices make the commodity too valuable to sell to the State Coffee Board, which cannot make prompt payments in some areas. So farmers barter their crop for consumer goods or food smuggled in from Kenya.

The coffee is then smuggled to Kenya to reach the world market. But roadblocks and security checks are so numerous that only army vehicles and personnel can ensure its passage.

Mormon Will Believed Genuine

MARSEILLES, France (Reuters) — French handwriting experts who examined a will of the late billionaire Howard Hughes have told a Las Vegas court they believe it is genuine, police said Thursday. The handwritten document, known as the Mormon will because it was found in a Mormon church in Salt Lake City, Utah, is dated 1968 and stipulates the sharing of $5 billion among nine persons. The will was sent to the Marcellus regional police laboratory last October for examination.

Delhi: An architectural history in microcosm

Many cities have stood where Delhi, capital of India, stands today. The true facts of the city's origin are lost now, but it was first written about some three thousand years ago in the Epics as Indraprastha, capital of the Pandavas, and Aryan tribe which occupied parts of Northern India.

Sometime later, a Rajput chieftain built a pool and a small settlement just to the south of Delhi. The site changed hands many times in the next century, and remained under Muslim rule until the British took it over.

Every ruler of Delhi has left his mark on the city. The city is nominally considered in two parts, Old Delhi, dominated by the Red Fort, and New Delhi, laid out by the British in the 1920's with Victorian grandeur. Yet engulfed in these are the remains of at least seven royal cities.

And Delhi has triumphed over them all. Intricately carved Hindu temples, the rounded domes of Muslim architecture, forts and mosques, the Victoria government buildings — a blend of Greek and Roman styles possible only to the British — all these and more make Delhi an architecture buff's paradise. Even a casual observer can appreciate the juxtaposition of styles and techniques which make this city a history of architecture in microcosm.

This architectural mix that is Delhi is symbolic of the rest of India. But more styles have been concentrated into this one sprawling metropolis than seems possible. Walking around the old city, the eye is continually caught by half-ruined buildings quickly restored to their original splendor with a little imagination.

During the Muslim period, the most magnificent monument built was the Qutb Minar, a red sandstone tower of victory started around 1200 AD. It stands 234 feet high and can be seen for miles. Its architectural interest lies mainly in its exquisitely tapered proportions and intricate calligraphic decoration. Inside the tower a spiral staircase winds to the top and is as solid today as when it was first built.

The Qutb Minar stands in the grounds of India's first mosque, whose delicately carved pillars belong to an earlier structure and were plastered over when the mosque was first built. The plaster has since worn away.

In the ruins of the mosque stands the Iron Pillar, made from pure malleable iron in the fourth century. For 1500 years, the pillar has not shown a trace of rust, but it has worn shiny in places from the thousands of hands touching it for good luck. Nearby are the traces of great battlements which once made Delhi impregnable.

Also close by is the village of Mehrauli, which boasts a fine octagonal tomb, and the massive ruined Fort of Tughlaqabad.

From her decks the Old South lives again

By FRANK MACOMBER
Aboard the Mississippi Queen — Ole Man River. Up A Lazy River. River, Stay Way From My Door.

These are some of the songs you recall as this gleaming white stern-wheeler, the first built in half a century, splashes out of New Orleans to snake her way up the barge-laden Mississippi toward Vicksburg, with stops at Baton Rouge and Natchez.

You don't have to be crazy about grits to travel upriver in the heart of the Old South, but it sure helps. For the Mississippi Queen, launched only last year, already is steeped in the tradition of life below the Mason-Dixon line.

Besides, once you've tried grits with butter, salt and pepper — or red-eye gravy — you'll probably stop around for a package of this miniature hominy when you return home. Incidentally, all the Mississippi Queen's fare is fit for a king.

The journey from New Orleans to Vicksburg, Miss., falls a little south of Mark Twain country. Yet the Mississippi Queen with its big red stern wheel, its gingerbread trim and 19th Century interior decor summon up memories of Twain's absorbing stories of another time on the Mississippi.

Betty Blake, one of the few lady presidents of a steamship line, the Delta Queen Steamship Co., wanted her new Queen to be authentic down to the last antebellum detail.

So aboard on the week-long journey up and down the Mississippi is Bodine Jackson Balasco, billed as the last of the riverboat gamblers and as a born swindler in the arts of the shell game and three-card monte.

No money changed hands, but Balasco's quicker-than-the-eye card dealing and his wizardry with the peep and three shells reminded memories of Twain's unscrupulous river gamblers.

Building history and tradition into a boat doesn't come cheap. It cost nearly $25 million to construct and outfit the Mississippi Queen to reflect the riverboats of an earlier era. Her sister boat (there are no ships on a river, the rivermen tell you), the Delta Queen, was built 50 years earlier and still moves up and down the Mississippi with style and grace. Her original cost was only $875,000.

During the trip upriver, the two Queens kissed at Natchez before moving back out into midstream to sail their separate ways.

Even if you shuddered at Early American history in school, a cruise up the Mississippi gives it to you all over again, but in the most engaging and sugar-coated way.

In Baton Rouge, Louisiana's historic capital, a tour guide escorts you on a leisurely ride through cobble and bricked streets that knew the wheels of wagons and carriages more than a century before Henry Ford came along.

Still mirroring the charm and gracious living of pre-Civil War days are such plantation homes as Magnolia Mound, nearly 200 years old but still presenting an attractive face to the world.

The tourist can't escape from Baton Rouge without seeing the home site of Gen. Zachary Taylor overlooking the river. It was here that the 12th American president — and Louisiana's only chief executive — came in triumph from the Mexican War in 1847. A year later he was elected president, in the American tradition of often turning victorious soldiers into politicians.

More intriguing for the visitor perhaps is the site of some latter-day history — the assassination of Huey P. Long, in the state Capitol in 1935. Well marked is the spot where the controversial Kingfish of Louisiana politics was fatally shot. Two bullets entered Long's body, but his assassin was riddled with more than 60 slugs as the governor's bodyguards rushed up too late to protect their boss.

The Mississippi Queen, cruising at about 10 knots upstream, comes on during the night to Natchez, named for a tribe of sunworshipping Indians when it was founded by explorers in 1715.

Natchez rose to such heights in the world of river commerce that at one time more than half the 20 million aires then in America called this tiny Mississippi town their home. Still open to the tourist or historian are the magnificent homes and plantation mansions built in those affluent times of long ago.

The sudden rich, dealing in cotton, tobacco, indigo and other goods, traveled to Europe to buy Italian marble mantels, French mirrors and chandeliers. Even today there still are paintings by such masters as Rubens gracing the high-ceilinged rooms and drafty halls of the Natchez showplaces.

With all their Dresden and Sevres china, Waterford and Venetian crystal, Sheffield and Georgian silver, the wealth of pre-Civil War days usually built their kitchens separately and depended on servants or slaves to bring the food to the house. Some families required that the servants whistle all the way from the kitchen to the dining room, so they couldn't sample the coveted dishes they carried. You can't whistle with your mouth full.

When war came in 1861, Natchez was left virtually defenseless, for Vicksburg, a key port city 72 miles to the north, had to be defended at all costs. Union forces occupied Natchez, but confined most of their damaging blows to Vicksburg during a 47-day siege which finally brought Confederate surrender to the army commanded by Gen. U.S. Grant.

Nevertheless, Natchez lay virtually dormant under Yankee occupation, and never really recovered during the years of Reconstruction and the great depression of the 1930s.

Yet, neither wars nor depressions can erase the charm of Southern river towns. Vicksburg fell July 4, 1863, the day after the Union victory at Gettysburg, virtually wiping out the chances for an ultimate Southern victory. The Mississippi and its shipping now belongs to the North.

Even so, Vicksburg still makes its best high-class and cultured Southern ladies who act as tour guides ask the question:

"We wonder what the United States would be like today if the South had won." You just know they think things would have been better that way.

Touring the Vicksburg battlefield, high on the bluffs of the mighty Mississippi, is a way to recapture a dramatic moment from history.

FOUR SEASONS TRAVELETTER

(a division of M. R. Travel Ltd.)

This is a new format for FOUR SEASONS TRAVEL'S Bi-Annual newsletter and we should, perhaps, explain why it's not coming to you through the mails as it has done for ten or more years. If advertising really works then we want to get more information to more of you, far more efficiently, at less cost than licking stamps and stuffing envelopes.

WARDAIR is in the process of increasing its fleet to meet an estimated one hundred percent growth factor in 1978/79! While other carriers are in fiscal traction, dumping, pruning and thinning out, WARDAIR is growing. Two more brand new 747 super luxury jets, valued at $50 million apiece, are slated for the line and should be in service within 22 to 24 months from now. The two well-loved Boeing 707s will shortly be sold and replaced with two new Douglas DC 10s. The dust on the Polar route price-war has now settled and this is how it looks for the balance of 1977: WARDAIR has slashed $30.00 from its mid-August fares (now at $439 for up to eight weeks) and has similar price reductions to MANCHESTER, PRESTWICK, AMSTERDAM and FRANKFURT. Eleven departures, at various dates from May through September, are totally sold out on all durations. Space is still available on three dates in July, four in August, a few in September and a couple in October. Space is still available on most departures to AMSTERDAM, except June 22nd, MANCHESTER and FRANKFURT have seats available as we go to press ... but do book now if you're planning on going this year.

NEW PRODUCT. SUNFLIGHT (SUN TOURS LTD.) has some ALL NEW products this year from VANCOUVER. If you've every enjoyed Mexico, you'll love SPAIN! A new series of direct ITC Charter flights, with hotel and breakfast included, are being offered to the COSTA DEL SOL and TORREMOLINOS at a price of 14 nights from $659. There is no 60 day pre-booking period required on these vacations. There are twelve departures in all, starting on May 23rd through November 7th, but bookings are steady and we expect the programme to fill rather quickly in view of the drop-off in travel to MEXICO. The value in this SPAIN package must be compared with the regular air fare. We have lots of brochures in this office.

The spring and summer offer you the best dollar values for HAWAII. The islands are less crowded, hotel accommodation is readily available and the lower volume of traffic creates the lower package prices offered by almost every tour company. Select from three major Canadian tour operators for savings. For example: WARDAIR (INTERVAC) and THE SHERATON HOTEL (MANOR WING). For the really budget minded (and a pleasant hotel, too) the KALIA INN, just a few steps from the REEF HOTEL, is $399 until June 24th. PLUS WARDAIR has just announced a sale of up to $50.00 per person discount until June 24th.

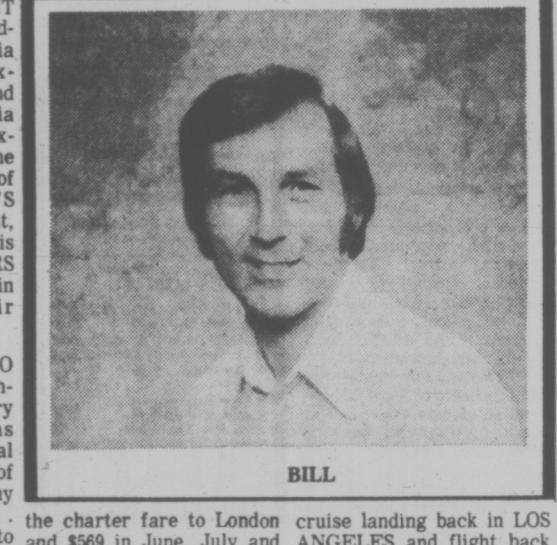

Another example is the FUNSEEKER HOLIDAY (PWA) — until March 30th the PACIFIC BEACH HOTEL cost was $609 — from April 9th through to September 24th the same hotel is reduced to $519 — another $90 saving. Or the SUNFLIGHT (SUNTOURS LTD.) offering the REEF TOWERS for $439 or the CINERAMA REEF for $539, both until September 25th.

No advance booking is required for these holidays but we are already registering heavily for the winter. FUNSEEKER flights to HAWAII depart VANCOUVER at 6 p.m. on Fridays and return to arrive at 7:20 a.m. ... easy connections at each end. WARDAIR flights to HAWAII depart at 5 p.m. on Fridays (after May 6th) and get back at twenty past six in the morning.

SUNFLIGHT (SUNTOURS LTD.) HAWAIIAN flights leave VANCOUVER 10:10 a.m. on Sundays and get you back at 10:45 p.m. — just short for the last flight to the Island. SUNFLIGHT (SUNTOURS LTD.) are the only tour operators offering charters to HAWAII this summer with Monday departures from $209 return — great for those with friends over there or their own accommodation.

WARDAIR has just announced its charters to HAWAII starting October 29th, through to December 8th, for 2, 3 or 4 weeks costing $219. WARDAIR charters for after December 8th will be announced later. If you decide you would like to go to HAWAII other than by charter, we can arrange transportation with CP AIR, WESTERN AIRLINES from VANCOUVER or PAN AM, CRISTOBAL through the PANAMA CANAL, visiting THE SITMAR EXPERIENCE 1977. Trans Canal sailings, MEXICO sailings — drop in and see us for further information.

ENERGY CRISIS?

You can bet there is and we're all going to suffer if we don't do something about it. What can you do? You can ignore it until it's too late or you can...

TAKE A COACH TOUR HOLIDAY AND SAVE CANADA'S FUEL SUPPLY. HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

44 people travelling by car, (2 to a car average), consume 8 gallons per day per person; 352 gallons per day for the group; nearly 5,000 gallons of high priced, short supply gasoline per day for the group; 44 people travelling by coach, consume less than 1/2 a gallon per day per person; 30 gallons per day for the group; 420 gallons of Diesel Fuel on a two week vacation.

WHICH ONE MAKES SENSE?

You know and we know. We know too that you like your privacy and want to travel where you wish, when you wish. At the moment, this may be your prerogative. How long it will last we don't know but the experts are fairly unanimous in extending it only a very short time.

We can't wait to tell you about the full operations of their right to their energy-rich, oil-producing, signs of "Lies, damn lies, and statistics". For the sacrifice of your individuality, the rewards may be more than compensation.

1. Save energy for future generations
2. Save ragged nerves from driving the traffic-choked highways
3. Save nerve-wracking arguments over family holiday planning
4. Save leaving the road early to grab the first Motel "Vacancy".

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

5. Save money
- WHY GO BY COACH?
1. The driver is a trained and responsible expert
2. THE NEW COACHES DELIVER COACHES, ABOVE THE TRAFFIC, ON THE GROUND RAILS, IN SURPRISE AND PLEASE YOU!
3. Coaches are air-conditioned and washroom equipped, serviced by expert mechanics. If there is a problem it costs you nothing.
4. Coffee and meal breaks, room reservations, sight-seeing and entertainment are pre-arranged for you.
5. Tours are escorted by trained personnel — you see all there is to see and know what it is — points of interest are explained thoroughly.

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

* 5. You may find that you enjoy the company of your fellow men.

Wonders, legends of Sri Lanka dated to Alexander the Great

If you've talked to anyone who's visited Sri Lanka, which used to be known as Ceylon, you were probably told of its wonders, and informed that being there was the highlight of a trip. That's the way almost everyone feels about it.

There's a legend here that one of the first famous tourists to this exotic land was Alexander the Great. There was no golf or tennis in his day, but there was the incomparable scenery, swimming, surfing and deep-sea fishing, all of which still appeal to visitors. About the only thing that has changed over the many centuries since Alexander's time is the hotel situation. Now there are plenty of modern, even luxurious establishments, and their prices probably are not much higher than they were then. This is undoubtedly the least expensive country you can visit.

Almost everyone arrives at Colombo, the capital and largest city. After looking around, travelers usually take off in a rented car, usually with a driver, which most visitors can afford here, or by train or bus to inspect some of the most remarkable sights on earth. As there are plenty of them, one thing you won't get here is bored.

About 93 miles from Colombo is Dambulla, one of the most interesting places on this island which is roughly the size of Ireland and located off the southeast coast of India. Dambulla is noted for some 2,000-year-old rock temples. A climb of about 600 feet takes you to a place where you can see the peaks of blue mountains in the distance, and emerald-green rice fields nearby.

Frescoes of Sri Lanka's history adorn the roofs of the five caves that make up the temples. The most important item here is the huge statue of the reclining Buddha. It is 47 feet long and exudes a feeling of strength that is as fine as any ancient Eastern sculpture. But it is only one of the many carvings in this place, each with a feeling and flowing of stone that makes Asian and Oriental rock-cutting the unique treasures that they are.

Another location with unusual charm, of a different sort, is Trincomalee, 180 miles from Colombo. This is the island's most popular off-season resort. Among many things, it has a magnificent harbor which is formed by two headlands projecting into the sea.

There are 210 steps of 700 yards between them almost encloses an expanse of water that is dotted with small islands, with countless remains of wrecked ships that have foundered through the centuries and which are still the delight of skin divers, who occasionally come up with a valuable trinket.

Of the coastal resorts, Hikkaduwa is one of the most popular, sharing that distinction with Bentota Beach, which now has the most tourist hotels. Hikkaduwa is 62 miles south of Colombo and is best known as a centre for skin-diving and spear-fishing. Both activities are favorites here because of the warm water and the coral reefs which stretch along the coast in that area. The latter, which offer marvelous marine scenery, are claimed by many to be among the most beautiful you can ever see, anywhere.

A seemingly unlimited variety of delicate tropical fish, swaying plant life, weird coral formations and tiny marine animals greet you in these waters. If you don't want to get your feet wet, you can get a closeup of some of this in a glass-bottomed boat.

Although Colombo is the arrival-place for almost everyone, and a very nice city it is, it is not the reason for visiting this former island kingdom. The reasons lie elsewhere, among the ruins of ancient cities that are as fascinating as you'll ever see, the incredibly beautiful mountain areas covered by tea plantations, the wild game preserves for animals and bird life, or the great beach resorts which are easy to get to as the entire island is surrounded by beaches. Then there are the outstanding shopping bargains, with low, low prices in all things from gems to hotel rooms and meals. Not only is everything here unbelievably low-priced, but the government gives all visitors a 5% per cent bonus when they change dollars into the local rupees.

Colombo didn't amount to much until 1878, when the opening of the Suez Canal brought new shipping activity to its harbor. It is now a busy junction for several sea routes. An area called The Fort is the business and commercial center of the city, and its shops contain the best products of this country.

Colombo is a mile from The Fort is the oldest section, known as Pettah. It is a typical Eastern bazaar, and many of its goods are sold by sidewalk vendors. Bargaining is common there and the pavements swarm with buyers and sellers.

The zoo in Colombo is regarded as one of the best in the Far East, and its greatest attraction is the Elephant Circus, which is presented every afternoon at 5 p.m. The big animals perform a number of acts, all of which is not only great fun for you but apparently just as enjoyable to the elephants. Performing seems to bring out the ham in them and it's very apparent that they're loving every moment they're on.

Because it's an island, the climate here is not as hot as in neighboring countries of Asia. When you get into the mountains, it's cool and you will need a sweater. You'll be very comfortable, but the Sri Lankans think 60 degree temperature is cold, only because they are accustomed to it being 20 degrees higher in the low areas.

Laugharne still medieval

Thomas' adopted home tamer now

LAUGHARNE, Wales Now that Dylan Thomas and Captain Cat have gone, this medieval seaside town is a somewhat tamer place.

Dylan, as those who knew him here still call him, had the place alive with the boisterous creatures of his imagination — Cat, the old blind sea captain; Polly Garter, the loose woman, and all the others who people his radio play, Under Milk Wood. The town was very like Laugharne, his adopted home for several years.

Dylan lies under a wooden cross up the hill in St. Martin's Churchyard, and the fishermen, the real-life characters who fueled his imagination and who used to drink with him at the Corporation Arms Pub and Brown's Hotel, have almost all disappeared with the cockles.

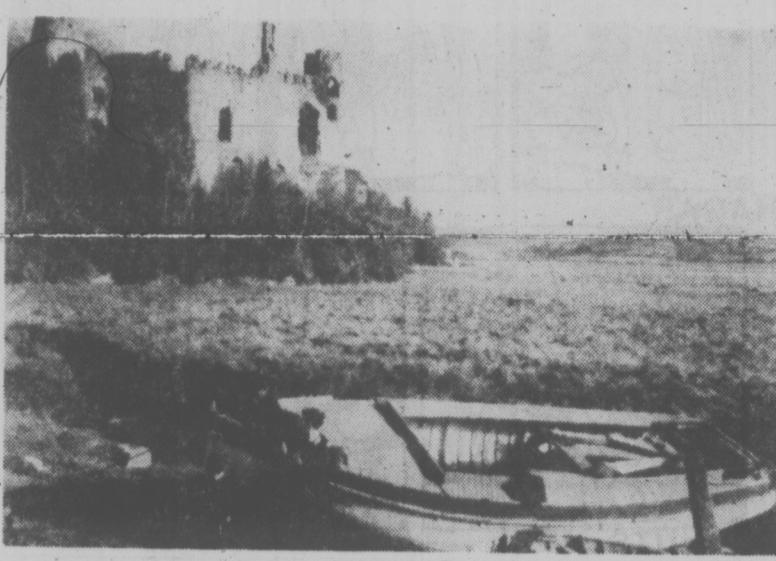

Why the poet died so young is less mysterious to the people here than why the cockles have disappeared. It is widely believed, here and elsewhere, that he drank himself to death at the age of 33 while he was in New York during a tour of the United States in 1953.

As for the cockle, the shellfish that used to be important to the fishing economy of the south coast of Wales, it too was apparently the victim of human frailty in some way. "It might have been the effluent from the industries along the coast," one man remarked. "Some say the oysters termed ruled the cockles," added another, "and some say it was overpicking by the cockle collectors."

Whatever the reason, fishermen no longer walk down the narrow streets to the foot of the hill and push their boats into the flat gray tide of the estuary off Carmarthen Bay. The fishermen live in Cardiff or Swansea and work in factories, or they drive down the road to the government arms-testing plant and get paid by the hour, not by the laboriously filled basket. Some are on the dole and live in the new low-cost public housing on the hill facing Dylan's grave.

This was a brawling town when the fishermen were here. "I've seen them start fighting as soon as the boats came in, rolling around there in the mud," said John Leonard Hughes, a former fisherman who knew the poet, as he drank his bitter in the Corporation Arms. "The only brawling here now is when the young men take it out in a bloody match of rugby."

The economic gap left by the cockles has been filled by the arms-testing plant and by tourism, inspired mainly by Dylan's memory. There are no fancy gift shops, but a few gift shops, but thousands of fans from all over the world come every year to look at the modest house over the estuary that he and his wife, Caitlin, occupied she no longer lives here and perhaps to try to catch a glimpse of the people who inspired the fictional characters.

Born and reared in Swansea, about 40 miles east along the coast, Dylan moved to Laugharne — the name rhymes with damp — in April 1938. He later wrote that he "just came, one day, for the day, and never left; got off the bus, and forgot to get on again."

For all the change, Laugharne, which has about 1,000 people, is still medieval in some ways. The old castle that has been in ruins for centuries no one knows when it was built is being repaired to make it safe for the tourists. The biggest man in town is not a mayor but a portreeve, the chief official of the municipal corporation that controls and leases hundreds of acres of public farmland.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for

Sunday, May 15

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on accounting procedures, taxes, investments, payments, possessions and collections. You are due for wider exposure or recognition. Minister or attorney provides inspirational key. Be confident. Yes, you are going places!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Move ahead; take initiative, be a self-starter. Welcome fresh contacts, experiences. Bring forth creative resources. Imprint your own style. Deal with Leo, Aquarius persons. Recent emotional "wound" is practically healed — even if you don't know it!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dream could be prophetic. The number "41" plays significant role. You gain insights through presence at special ceremony or words relayed by pastor. Older individual, possibly a parent, wants you to be happy, wise, healthy. Know it and respond accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on romance, fun-and-games, vacation plans and wishes. One you met on cruise ship or during previous vacation will "get in touch." Gemini, Sagittarius persons could be in scenario. Money in connection with career aspiration can be discussed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may feel "bogged down" because of details, red tape, added pressures, responsibility. Stand tall; be confident and make clear that you won't back down where principles are involved. If this you do you invite ultimate success. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with cycle of travel, language, publication, communication. Distance is bridged. One you "care for" actually adores you and you will know it. Remove barrier to "touching" in an emotional sense. Special message helps way to progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money, leases, finances affecting partnership or marriage — these command attention. Unusual or inexplicable occult experience also figures prominently. The number "6" crops up more times than could be explained by coincidence. Domestic adjustment, residence change is indicated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low. Time is on your side. You'll receive better offer if patient. Overcome temptation to listen to "experts." Your own inner feelings serve as reliable guide. Emphasis on legal maneuvering, public relations, agreement reached with partner, mate.

Astrological Forecast for

Monday, May 16

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Creative inquiries could save money; be a comparison shopper. Assert needs. State budgetary requirements! Avoid excess in spending — and other areas. Young person who makes demands should not be taken too seriously. Figures prominently. Possessions are worth more than might be imagined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You receive assurances and denials at one and the same time. Sort out information; you can arrive at truth. Steady approach is much better than sensationalism. Accent on ability to perceive what is "fluff" what is relevant. You'll win!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Highlight practicality, willingness to conclude transaction. Leo — and another Aquarian — could figure prominently. Deal with "hard news." Leave features, frills for another day. One who has experience and compassion will become an ally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ideas come into focus. Your intuitive intellect is on target. Short trip may be necessary part of agenda. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently. The relative who complains is looking for attention and a sign of affection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be direct, specific, familiar with "homework." Accent on desire, communication with one in authority. Money and love could mix — if you are patient. Frank discussion, regarding budget and aspirations, should be on agenda. You'll see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be analytical. Refuse explanation that mere "something happened." Find reasons; delve beneath superficial indicatory dirt. Accent on prestige, standing in community — or profession. Hold responsible executive to letter of agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be practical. See people as they are — keep tight rein on possessions, money. Tendency exists for others to try for something — with you a prime target. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Favorable Moon aspect coincides with change, affair of heart, creativity, variety, intensified relationship, special "consultation" with child. You are able to shake off burden not rightfully your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be definite about quotations, techniques. Emphasis on what is hidden from view. You could be dealing with a "psychic." Be rational; maintain emotional balance. Member of opposite sex insists that you make a commitment. Pisces figures in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on legalities, marital status, working partnership, rights and permissions. Lie low. Time is on your side. If you don't know what to do, do nothing. Get organized in sense that you bring priorities into focus. You should improve image, public relations. Wait, listen, observe, plant seeds for future germination.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight natural qualities of humor, curiosity, versatility. Holiday spirit could prevail.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ideas come into focus. Your intuitive intellect is on target. Short trip may be necessary part of agenda. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently. The relative who complains is looking for attention and a sign of affection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be direct, specific, familiar with "homework." Accent on desire, communication with one in authority. Money and love could mix — if you are patient. Frank discussion, regarding budget and aspirations, should be on agenda. You'll see!

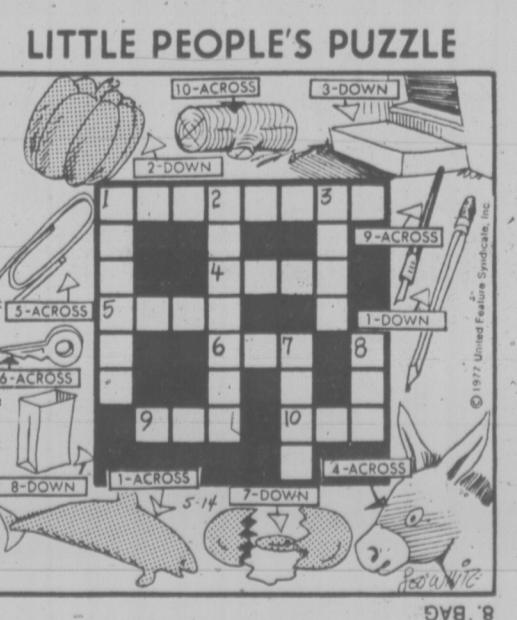

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be analytical. Refuse explanation that mere "something happened." Find reasons; delve beneath superficial indicatory dirt. Accent on prestige, standing in community — or profession. Hold responsible executive to letter of agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish project, let go of past, get rid of losing situation, stop carrying burden which was not your own in first place. Aries, Libra figures prominently. Accent on employment, general well-being, sudden revelation which lets proverbial cat out of bag. You'll see!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar aspect coincides now with minor turmoils, general confusion but chance to be happy and creative. Specifically, love is in picture — so is lovers' quarrel. Surprise due in connection with money — it is of pleasant variety.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money, leases, finances affecting partnership or marriage — these command attention. Unusual or inexplicable occult experience also figures prominently. The number "6" crops up more times than could be explained by coincidence. Domestic adjustment, residence change is indicated.

has revised that list with a new No. 1 coaster, the Texas Cyclone at Houston's Astroworld, a replica of Brooklyn's famed Cyclone at Coney Island.

Another fan says it's like hitting yourself in the head repeatedly with a hammer. It feels good only after you quit. "It's the greatest thrill on this planet," said Robert Cartmell, an art professor at the State University of New York.

All were trying to explain why they are members of a fast-growing cult of thrill-seekers who travel the country much like surfers comb the shorelines seeking the ultimate wave.

Cartmell and his friends are roller-coaster freaks.

They can't explain adequately why they repeatedly subject their bodies to 90-foot drops at speeds of 60 mph., neck-popping turns and doubled body weight from the force of gravity at the bottom of the dips.

It starts with a slow chain-driven climb to the top of the first drop, usually the biggest on the ride. Less than two minutes later, the travellers are returned to an upright position.

Cartmell has ridden 139 roller coasters and may be the leading authority on them.

After painstaking research, he published his first top 10 roller coaster rankings in New York Times in 1974. He

The aura of danger surrounding roller coasters is a myth, Cartmell said. "It can give you a heart attack, but as far as other physical danger, it's as safe as a merry-go-round.

"When I ride a roller coaster, I always keep both hands on the bar. Accidents always happen when somebody is trying to show off. I tell everybody if you stay in your seat, you'll survive."

Cartmell has built up a correspondence list of about 5,000 other roller-coaster enthusiasts.

Cartmell got a letter from three test pilots who wanted to enter their most thrilling ride to his list—in one of their test planes.

"The first drop is 20,000 feet," the letter said.

Cartmell will go anywhere, any time to test a new coaster.

While suffering from pneumonia, he ignored his doctor's orders and flew here last year to ride the Texas Cyclone for the first time.

After riding the Texas Cyclone about 30 times, Cartmell decided to give it the top billing, dropping the previous leader, the Thunderbolt at West Mifflin, Pa. to No. 2.

Mister Twister at Denver, Colo., moved into the rankings for the first time as No. 3. The Coney Island Cyclone, which Cartmell says is the world's most famous coaster, is fourth.

Skilled Leave Nfld.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (CP) — The exodus of thousands of skilled workers from Newfoundland is causing concern in the province's business and industrial communities.

"Close to 1,000 skilled tradesmen have left the province in recent weeks to seek work on the Canadian mainland," a spokesman for the St. John's Board of Trade said.

"Loss of so many skilled tradesmen is a serious drain on our resources."

The exodus to mainland Canada, the United States and other parts of the world is not new for Newfoundland but it had been halted somewhat by the establishment of industries such as the oil refinery at Come-by-Chance, the Labrador Linerboard mill at Stephenville and a phosphorus plant at Long Harbor on Placentia Bay.

As these new industries opened, any Newfoundlanders returned to the province from other areas.

But the prosperity didn't last.

Today, the oil refinery is idle and the linerboard mill is closing, and there have been layoffs in the mining industry, the provincial government and the construction industry.

Statistics Canada figures show unemployment in Newfoundland rose in March to a total of 33,000 jobless, a rate of 16.1 per cent. That is almost double the seasonally adjusted national rate of 8.1 per cent.

However, 61,500 people—almost double the Statistics Canada figure—were receiving unemployment insurance benefits at the end of March, indicating the real unemployment rate is closer to 32 per cent.

The statistics are depressing for the thousands of students seeking summer jobs. They are being released from universities, trade schools, the fisheries college and high schools into a job market already plagued with high unemployment. Last July the unemployment rate for the 15-to-24 age group was 20 per cent.

But this summer might be a little better. Canada Manpower officials here hope the Canada Summer Games, the federal government's new Young Canada Works program and an increased federal hiring program will help ease the problem.

BIG BOAT BUILDING PROGRAM

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland government will launch a $35-million program this year to build at least 100 longliner fishing vessels over the next five years.

The boats will be designed for use in both the inshore and offshore fisheries.

Fisheries Minister Walter Carter said in making the announcement that the province's inshore fishing fleet is being depleted at the rate of 30 to 60 boats a month.

Another reason for the new boat-building program is the establishment of the 200-mile zone which will mean revival of the fish stocks and the need for more inshore catching effort.

Twenty boats will be built this year and at least 20 each year over the next four years.

The wooden boats are expected to give a boost to a number of small shipbuilding yards around the province that have been having considerable downtime.

Meanwhile, the fisheries department is beginning to make plans for trawlers as well. Trawlers are generally larger than longliners and use nets to surround and scoop up the fish, while longliners use lines of baited hooks. The department is surveying local trawler owners to find out their short-term and long-term needs for vessels to maintain and expand their catching and processing operations.

A number of trawlers used by local fish plants are the old side-trawler type which cannot compete with modern sterntrawlers and some plants have found it difficult to keep them operating since quotas have been put on species the side-trawlers usually catch.

Carter did not say how much money would be required to build new trawlers, but a few years ago the provincial government talked about launching a $40-million trawler-building program. Since then, costs have risen greatly and the cost of a German-built trawler reinforced to fish in ice-infested waters is said to be $15 to $20 million.

In addition to the shipbuilding program, Carter said he had "much more in store for fishery development in the province this year" but gave no details.

Canada's Food and Drug Act prohibits advertisements for drugs which claim to prevent, treat or cure some 45 diseases. These include cancer, diabetes, epilepsy, obesity, rheumatoid arthritis, sexual impotence and others. For treatment of any of these disorders, consult your doctor and take only the medication he prescribes.

This is some of the important advice culled from the 32-page bilingual booklet Drugs — Handle With Care.

The booklet urges you to take exactly the drug dosage your doctor recommends, not more, not less. Also, check with him before you use any left-over medication from a previous illness. The potency of the drug may have diminished or you may have become resistant to it.

In addition don't take non-prescription drugs for any length of time. Any disorder which does not get better in a few days could be the symptom of a more serious illness. Better see your doctor.

The booklet also says that many people waste money by buying unnecessary vitamins or mineral supplements. A healthy individual who eats a wide variety of well-balanced meals usually does not need additional vitamins or minerals. However, a doctor may prescribe them to pregnant women, infants or sick persons.

Trained Volunteers Still Needed

With governments at all levels entering more and more into everyone's life, is the end to voluntary service in sight?

Speaking on the value of volunteers at a Victoria Women's Canadian Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel on Wednesday, Pauline McGibbon, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, gave an emphatic "no" to that question.

"I know this isn't so," she said.

Rather, she believes, the value of the trained volunteer is recognized more than ever before and that "today, governments are accepting the fact that they have a role to play in improving society."

There will always be a place for knowledgeable volunteers, insisted this outstanding Canadian and the first woman to be named a lieutenant-governor of a province in Canada.

Enlarging on that word "knowledgeable," she gave it as her opinion that "the volunteer who is willing to learn and accept guidance is welcomed with open arms."

Why? "Because it is a recognized fact that the better trained the individual is, the greater is the benefit to the community as a whole."

Prior to accepting the position of lieutenant-governor, Pauline McGibbon had been active in volunteer work for over 35 years.

"It is the one area in which the individual is free to choose the direction of his or her time and talents," she told the luncheon meeting.

"Citizen participation," as it is sometimes called, is not found in every country throughout the world.

In fact, in some countries it is an idea foreign to their way of life.

In North America, however, "we are brought up to believe that if one is contributing some of his or her free time to improving our way of life, it indicates a sense of obligation to the community and the country."

"We believe in the value of caring, sharing ourselves and participating."

"Without volunteers, Canada would be lonelier, less human and sadder in spirit."

Turning to the "learning experience" to which we all aspire today, the Ontario lieutenant-governor suggested that "to work as a volunteer is one of the best ways to broaden one's vision and one's acquaintanceships."

"Men and women have within them truths to communicate, skills to contribute, which demand expression."

With this in mind, they should concentrate on the

McGIBBON ... believes they are areas where they have special capabilities; "then society will benefit from the individual's talents and capabilities."

In addition to the learning experience, volunteer work has another attraction "related to the people with whom you work."

Explaining that statement, the speaker said when people join together to work for a cause, there is "a wonderful result."

Strangers become friends, people help one another, people encourage on another.

All that need be remembered is "to understand, to be sympathetic and, above all, to see the humorous side of a situation."

Here, Pauline McGibbon painted a quick word picture of young people, "and some not so young," who are rebelling today against the loss of identity in this world as they see it.

"Everything is so big, so impersonal. There is the fear of being lost in a crowd and we hear 'what can I do?'" Voluntary work is the answer, she said.

"Working as a volunteer you are a person. You are recognized and valued as an individual."

"By giving of your talents, you are recognizing, consciously or sub-consciously, the truth of the saying that no one can save life — you can only use it."

"You are giving and you are receiving. You are involved, which in turn produces a sense of belonging, a feeling of being needed. You are promoting and protecting the welfare of all the community."

"To be concerned for others — this is what being a volunteer is all about: This is why I say, be proud to be a volunteer."

Christine MacNab, president of Victoria Women's Canadian Club, presided at the luncheon.

Mrs. Mike Young, wife of Victoria's Mayor, and Mrs. George R. Pearkes, an honorary member of the club.

With DOROTHY FRASER

Hooray! Handloom's having a sale! . . .

Because the Handloom decides to hold a sale . . . that's NEWS! . . . Over the years, they've had so few that we can count them on one hand! . . . This one, which starts Monday and continues all next week . . . is Wayne Ngan pottery . . . whose distinctive beauty is well known to all you connoisseurs! . . . There'll be reductions of 20% and 25% . . . So if you crave a lovely Wayne Ngan piece at a bargain price, . . . do hurry down to the handloom!

New arrivals we saw this week include some of the most gorgeous hand-made jewellery you ever laid eyes on by the Pas-Sylvestre . . . Enamel on copper or sterling silver . . . Rings, bracelets in the most fascinating designs . . . delicate flowers, birds, groups of little people, and various stylized objects . . . Darling little dishes too . . . One beauty adorned with long-stemmed wood violets . . . Lucille Pancy is the creator of some unusual wooden vases for dried flower arrangements . . . some with designs of real leaves . . . Also white pine boxes, swizzle spoons, sugar and flour scoops, plus more spoons in various interesting shapes and sizes . . . the little boxes may be hung on a wall, or stand freely, as receptacles for napkins, bills, letters and such . . . Saw some lovely big sculptured owls by Sheila White . . . delightful for a garden or patio! . . . And these are just a few of the new objects d'art at . . . Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

Beautiful and practical loungewear in this lovely shop . . .

Our idea of heaven is being turned loose in Dion's Boudoir Boutique . . . and told to help herself to anything we yearned for!

Mind you, there wouldn't be much stock left . . . but we can dream, can't we? . . . But all fastidious aside, Dion's Boutique is sheer delight to baffle in and to satisfy one's heart's desire for lovely loungewear! . . . Not only do they have ethereal negligee sets for the bride . . . but practical lounge robes for travelling . . . and for the lady who wants to be comfortable of an evening without looking as if she's in deshabille! . . . A lot of the lounge gowns could double as evening or hostess dresses . . . yet they're mostly very simple, completely washable! . . . There's a long Christian Dior gown with bell sleeves, great splashes of blue flowers with greenery . . . A knife-pleated Dior Caftan . . . (caftans are really "in" nowadays . . . Cover a multitude of sins!) . . . Another super lightweight caftan with lower neckline . . . perfect for travelling . . . Carolyn crinkled nylon robes . . . either long or short . . . Lovely colors . . . perfect travellers . . . For pool and beach wear there's a whole section of gowns and coverups in lightweight terry . . . plain, striped, hooded . . . you name it, Dion's have it! . . . One yellow beauty comes with its own turban . . . For real cool nightwear, there are cotton bednighties and robes . . . silk-like in texture . . . so pretty they'll make your heart skip a beat! . . . Dion's Boudoir Boutique, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-3444.

A true "hair-y" story . . .

Make up your mind right now that this summer you're going to have great looking hair . . . Hair that you can easily manage . . . Healthy, bouncy hair shaped so artfully that it will almost fall into place by itself . . . play up your best features! . . . And to make sure of getting all this . . . make an appointment at the Witch's Hut or the Charming Lady . . . two sister salons about whose staffs, or surroundings, we cannot speak too highly! . . . They're so professional, so very expert at their jobs that you never have to worry about how you'll turn out! . . . Maybe you've had hair problems in the past . . . perms that didn't take . . . tints that turned funny . . . Well, just talk to Gerry at the Hut, or Tibor at the Lady . . . Both are past masters at the chemistry of hair . . . know exactly how to correct your problem, whatever it may be! . . . We KNOW! . . . You've got "impossible" hair . . . but Tibor performs his magic recently and compliments have been flying ever since! . . . So make your appointment now and start preparing for a new you!

We also want you to know that these two salons have the biggest variety and versatility of hair-care products in town! . . . Every one is individually selected for its particular qualities and the staffs know just what to recommend to you in the way of shampoos etc. to use at home between appointments! . . . Witch's Hut, 728 View St., 388-7368, and Charming Lady, 1712 Douglas St., 385-8133.

Ultimate suede used in an interesting way . . .

We must confess we'd never seen ultimate suede combined with cotton before . . . but there they were in Charming's this week . . . darling cotton print sun dresses trimmed with ultimate suede . . . in both daytime and after-five lengths . . . effective as all getout! . . . For evening there's a pretty navy and white print trimmed with red ultimate suede, and its counterpart in green and white with green trim . . . In the short dresses the top is white with navy print . . . skirt navy with white print . . . the whole thing accented with the lovely red trim . . . We noticed a pretty navy with white print pantsuit with ultimate suede . . . and while we're on the subject of this soft, suede-like fabric . . . Charming's have complete pantsuits, dresses and skirts in ultimate suede . . . in a whole rainbow of colors! . . . It looks like a sundress summer! . . . Sundresses by Leslie Fay come in green, navy and yellow prints . . . each with its own matching scarf! . . . If you're in the market for a striking new swimsuit now's the time to make your selection . . . Charming's have some beauties by famous makers . . . This is also a good place to choose your summer accessories . . . Have a look at the attractive triangular shawls . . . so completely right for slipping around your shoulders on a summer evening! . . . Charming's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1555.

New lighting for a new look . . .

Do you know that changing the lighting in a room is a very effective alternative to re-decorating the whole room? . . . With spring full upon us and summer not far behind . . . you'd probably like a lighter, airier, more informal look to some of your rooms . . . And it's a look that the new lamps can do a lot to achieve! . . . You'll understand if you drop in to the Lampworks at Standard Furniture . . . They've just received a lot of new styles in lamps . . . which they have grouped and displayed with complementary accessories so you'll get a very good idea of what can be done . . . Right now there's a strong feeling for light finishes and rattans . . . ceramics in earthy tones . . . Or if you want a bit more sophistication, the oriental look in finer ceramics . . . or the soft sheen of wire-brushed brass . . . Lamps are generally lower to go with today's lower furniture . . . Shades are pleated or textured, producing a soft light . . . Among the 3 or 4 new shipments of lamps at Standard you'll find more variety price-wise than ever before . . . Many are more reasonable than heretofore! . . . They've a super selection of hand-rubbed brass lamps . . . which give such warmth to a room . . . A Canadian line of pine lamps, most of which have a touch of brass . . . especially nice for a man's den! . . . Go see these new lamps displayed like you'd have them in your own home! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

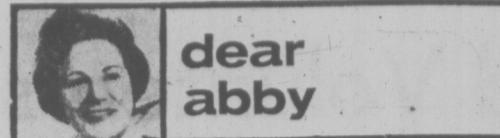

Miss Frith's all set for summer! . . .

Forecast for summer: Warmer and drier! . . . Lovely thought, isn't it? And Miss Frith, bless her heart, feels so strongly about the joys of summer that their buyers really went overboard this year and bought summer clothes that are real knockouts! . . . There are lots and lots of dresses . . . and blouses . . . and sportswear . . . All just as fresh and pretty as can be . . . the sort of clothes that will make you glad you're female! . . . We noticed a lot of two-piece dresses . . . very popular this year! . . . Like the white pleated polyester skirts with printed shirt tops and attached scarf! . . . Or the cool, sophisticated cotton jersey in black and white, with black patent belt! . . . There are smart new Leslie Fay dresses . . . so very well proportioned for shorter figures! . . . One of these has a white skirt and two-toned pink top with the new tunnel drawstring waist . . . a matching polka-dotted scarf! . . . Another two-piece dress is a white linen-like fabric with bright little nosegays sprinkled all over . . . tie belt, short sleeves . . . If you go for pantsuits, Miss Frith has some beauties! . . . One with white pants and multi-striped pullover top . . . rolled belt in strands the same colors as the stripes! . . . We should point out that now is a great time to go shopping for next winter's cruise and holiday clothes . . . So much more to choose from, and less expensive, too! . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 388-7181.

New sweaters for summer . . .

We've always thought there was something particularly pretty and feminine about Shetland Fair Isle sweaters, don't you? . . . Wilson's have just received their long delayed order of Alan Paine sweaters, and there are some real pretty Fair Isle pullovers among them! . . . Lovat mix, camel and blue . . . with a $45 price tag! . . . Another Shetland, at $37.50, has a quasi-Scandinavian design that's quite different! . . . White, black, navy, camel and plus in these . . . This shipment of Alan Paine was well worth waiting for! . . . All sorts of pullovers . . . one a wool/linen/cotton blend, with crew neck and diamond outline design . . . Camel with orange and brown . . . blue with sky and navy . . . white with navy and green or with navy and red! . . . Some style with wide-apart line stripes . . . white with red and navy and sky with yellow and navy . . . Both of these are $37.50. A third one has bold stripes . . . Yellow with camel and sky, white with camel and sky, and white with pink and dove . . . $30 for this! . . . There are also plain pullovers with solid diamond pattern in front, in several color combinations! . . . And two different cardigans with saddle shoulders . . . the linen-cotton-oryellow wool mix . . . White, sky, parchment or yellow . . . white with white, sky, parchment or yellow . . . And a pure Shetland in all these colors plus navy, red, grey and green . . . $37.50! . . . These are full cut . . . great for golf! . . . Sizes from 36 to 42 at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 392-2821.

Deduction to Giver

DEAR ABBY: When someone makes a donation to a charity in the name of a friend as a Christmas gift, who gets the tax deduction?

Don't pass this off so hastily. If A sends B a card saying that he has given $100 to the American Red Cross in B's name, A has either made a gift to B which is not tax-deductible (B being an individual, not a charity) or he has made no gift to B.

If A has made a gift to the ARC for B, then B should claim and get the tax deduction. If A has made no gift to B, but rather a gift to the ARC, why should he brag to B?

DEAR ABBY: You recently wrote that if a person receives an obscene telephone call, he can tie up the caller's line by simply not hanging up. That's not true! It's the other way around. The caller can tie up the line of the callee by not hanging up.

The callee cannot disconnect himself from the caller unless the caller hangs up!

You've probably had a thousand letters on this, but one more won't hurt.—EX-PHONE OPERATOR

DEAR EX: You're right—I called it wrong! Thank you (and the other 99 who wrote to straighten me out).

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six months and have put up with about as much nagging from my husband as I am going to.

Here is the problem: My 27-year-old "honey" wants me to wash his back. He claims his mother washed it for him every day when he was home. We have gotten into several fights over this. I don't need anybody to wash MY back, and I don't see why he needs somebody to wash his.

What should I do?—MARY LOU

DEAR MARY LOU: Give him "the brush"—the kind (and the other 99 who wrote to straighten me out).

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six months and have put up with about as much nagging from my husband as I am going to.

Create extra comfort and cushioning by inserting cozy insoles inside shoes or boots. These come in aerated foam for hot weather or fleecy lambswool for winter wear.

Give feet a few minutes of "rest and relaxation" on getting home from work. Prop them up on a pillow or chair to stimulate circulation and revive them for evening social activities.

Spray on a soothing mist of foot refresher spray for an instant pickup.

Pamper feet with a relaxing soak in a bath of mentholated granules. Then, massage in a softening lotion and rub away dry skin patches with a rough skin remover.

Finish off with a light sprinkling of foot powder and pat it between the toes.

As part of the daily exercise routine, include a few limbering toners for feet and legs. If time doesn't allow, too! "gymnastics," walk around in a pair of exercise sandals.

Neck Pain? Could Be The Feet

If you are suffering from a pain in the neck, it might be wise to look to the other end of the body for the cause, say footcare experts.

Improperly-fitting or poorly-designed shoes can often cause unnatural muscular strains, says the consultants of a leading footcare products company.

KNIT AND CHAT

Round Table Cloth Can Be Crocheted

By MAY E. Mac LEAN

First I would like to correct any confusion which readers wrote and pointed out to me. In the knitted hat in instructions which I gave in the column a week or two ago, I said "work in stocking-stitch, every row knit." This, of course, should have read,

"Work in garter-stitch, every row knit." Many thanks to the readers who took the time and trouble to point this out, and to those of you who wrote wishing me a speedy recovery from the car accident. I'm happy to tell you I am feeling much better, especially now spring has finally arrived, too.

Several have asked for a round crochet tablecloth and I do have one in the pineapple design on Leaflet No. 6953, which is obtainable in the same way as other patterns.

You'll find the details at the end of the column.

It's important to wear properly-fitting, comfortable shoes, but it's equally important to make regular footcare and exercise part of the personal grooming routine.

Exercise to stimulate circulation by wiggling toes or twisting feet from the ankle in a circular motion.

If you rub feet the wrong way and create friction spots, take preventive measures to protect these tender areas:

Place a piece of cushiony moleskin (cut to size) over the irritated area, or inside

Create extra comfort and cushioning by inserting cozy insoles inside shoes or boots.

These come in aerated foam for hot weather or fleecy lambswool for winter wear.

Give feet a few minutes of "rest and relaxation" on getting home from work. Prop them up on a pillow or chair to stimulate circulation and revive them for evening social activities.

Spray on a soothing mist of foot refresher spray for an instant pickup.

Pamper feet with a relaxing

soak in a bath of mentholated granules. Then, massage in a softening lotion and rub away dry skin patches with a rough skin remover.

Finish off with a light

sprinkling of foot powder and</p

Feather-Filching Felines: Can They Be Discouraged?

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER
DEAR DR. MILLER: We have two loves — cats and birds. We have an impenetrable fence around the backyard. We built it when we bought the house. Even cats can't climb it. We developed it into a bird sanctuary, or did until "Lucky," our cat, came on the scene 14 years ago. From then on, it was nip and tuck for the birds. The smart ones survived, the dumb didn't. We're now looking for a kitten replacement for our departed Lucky. Is there any way we can get a youngster who will share the backyard with the birds and not look on them as lunch? —W.A.

DEAR W.A.: A youngster's much less likely to develop into a feather-filching feline if it's selected from a litter of non-hunting adults, if it's carried off by six weeks of age (before it's likely to have begun to hunt, anyway). Finally, if it's kept indoors while a kitten, it's less likely to learn to hunt on its own.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our question is about this dog which just wandered in on us. There's something wrong with his rear end. There must be indications that the hind leg movements are disassociated from brain function.

In other words, the dog's legs are functioning with the aid of a spinal (cord) reflex, but the normal nerve messages are no longer going to and from the brain (since the brain is not receiving messages from the hindquarters, it would be a dead end as far as pain is concerned). No pain messages could be sent to or received from the brain, and the area would be completely insensitive. If you still have this dog I presume it's now under a veterinarian's supervision. It certainly should be.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I just inherited Sidney, a parrot. God only knows how old he is. But I do know he's at least twice as old as Skipper, my 13-year-old wire-haired terrier. Sidney looks to be in great shape, but I just went through a big thing with Skipper, and I was wondering if I should get Sidney in to the vet for a checkup on his...

DEAR DR. K.: Undoubtedly your veterinarian should check on Sidney, but you can be sure that if he has any problems, they won't be his teeth — he doesn't have any. He's not even supposed to. No bird is. Sidney substitutes a strong beak and a strong stomach. His doctor can point out how to care for these and other parts of his anatomy.

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the last few months, Andy's been acting strange and is very forgetful. I can't tell if she has a headache or not, but I'm wondering if older cats ever get brain tumors?

DEAR DR. P.: Brain tumors are rare in old cats. Senility, however, is not.

Peace-Keeping in Lebanon Taking a Toll on Syrians

By STUART AVERBACH
Washington Post

DAMASCUS — More than a year after it entered the Lebanon civil war, Syria finds itself with almost 30,000 of its crack troops stuck there enforcing a shaky peace. Government officials and diplomats here say Syria wants to get them out as soon as possible.

Before the troops pull out, Syria wants to make sure it is leaving behind a Lebanese government that is strong, stable and — above all — friendly to Syria.

While some officials here may harbor the dream of rebuilding the Greater Syria of the pre-First World War Ottoman Empire with Damascus as its capital, there is no indication that they want to achieve it through occupation.

Rather, diplomats here believe, they are trying to extend their hegemony over this part of the Middle East through political means. They have already forged close ties with Jordan and a full-fledged federation. The Palestine Liberation Organization is firmly under Syria's control, and presumably Syria would be influential in any Palestinian state set up on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

With Lebanon under its influence, Syria would once again have a major outlet to the sea, as it had during the 500-year rule during the Ottoman empire.

Right now Syria's control in Lebanon is exercised primarily through its troops, which make up the bulk of the Arab peace-keeping force. That ended 19 months of civil war in November. There is no effective Lebanese army. The religious, social and economic differences that divided the country before the fighting still prevail, and the Palestinian presence continues to be heavy.

In many ways Damascus is the capital of Lebanon. More major decisions on Lebanese matters are made here than in Beirut, and Lebanese politicians of both right and left come here often.

Syrian officials here express doubt that they can pull their troops out of Lebanon until the government of President Elias Sarkis — who is considered pro-Syrian — has firm control over the Phalange Party's Beshir Ghamayal.

"We want to get out," said Assad Elias, press secretary to Syrian President Hafez Assad. "But we don't want to leave chaos. We want to leave Sarkis strongly in control."

Assad has said he expects that his troops will have to remain in Lebanon for at least another year.

Faced with the delicate job of keeping a balance between leftists and rightists, Christians and Moslems, Palestinians and Lebanese, Syria has hit first one faction then another.

The Palestinians were the first target. Syria's tanks and troops, ringing their camps assisted by the Syrian-backed Saiga Palestinians, moved in on the leftist Rejection Front groups who oppose any settlement with Israel. At the same time, Syria forced the mainstream Palestinian groups to go along with its policies and gained control over all weapons and supplies going to Palestinian fighters.

More recently the Syrians have begun cracking the whip over rightist Christians, first by subtly moving troops into Christian parts of Beirut and harassing leaders such as the Phalange Party's Beshir Ghamayal.

Last month the Syrians actively supported Palestinian fighters along Lebanon's southern border with Israel. They bore a security belt set up by Israel-supported rightist Christians along the border, and then Syria called the Palestinians off.

With the Soviet Union finally giving its imprimatur to the Syrian intervention in Lebanon — after strongly opposing it a year ago — Syria began to crack down on the Palestinians again three weeks ago.

All the while Syria has been trying to prop up the Sarkis government. Its representative on the four-party committee supervising the peace in Lebanon, Col. Mohammed Khali, insisted against the wishes of the other Arab states on the committee: Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — that all heavy weapons be held first one faction then another.

She Reigns Over Sheiks and Oil Barons

By NAN ROBERTSON
NEW YORK — Wanda Jablonski may know more about the people who have oil and the people who want it than just about anybody in the world.

The world's foremost oil economist thinks so, and other authorities in the field agree.

Miss Jablonski is the founder and publisher of Petroleum Intelligence Weekly.

"Must" reading in what is politically and economically the key industry of the 20th century and an almost exclusively male domain. Moreover, she has long reigned supreme among the Arab sheiks and tall Texans who dominate the field and who are world-renowned for taking more than a dim view of uppity females.

Tiny, big-eyed and tough-minded, she runs her international operation from her penthouse on the Upper East Side and her offices at 48 West 48th Street, with branches in London, Paris, Rome and Kuwait. Her No. 2 is also a woman: Georgia Maris, the weekly's editor-in-chief.

The several thousand subscribers include the top echelons of all the world's oil companies, most governments, including the United States, Soviet, Japanese and Chinese, and anyone else who is seriously in the energy business. Her crucial inside information on the geopolitics of oil, contained in an eight-kilo-12-page newsletter printed on yellow paper, costs $540 a year.

There is no advertising. None of her 10 editors or other employees may own oil stock or engage in consulting. Of Miss Jablonski, Walter J. Levy, considered to be the world's leading oil economist, said: "She has an absolutely unique ability, a unique career, a unique publication — there is nobody in the field of oil analysis devoted to journalism who can match her."

The two met when Levy was heading up the petroleum programs of the Marshall Plan after the Second World War and she was oil editor of The Journal of Commerce. "Her intellect and instincts were superb even then," he recalled.

Miss Jablonski is convinced that her present clout comes from the fact that "I got there first and kept on going there." Her fascination with Arabs and the Middle East began early. She was steeped in the original and keenly perceived writings of Freya Stark, an English traveler and explorer whose books on the areas in the 1930s and 40s have become classics.

Miss Jablonski's own life would read like an exotic romance. Born in Czechoslovakia in 1920, she spent her first six years with her autocratic grandfather in his ancestral castle "until my father could afford me." Her father was a famous botanist "but his work had no commercial application," so he took a second degree in geology, then joined Socony, which later merged with the Mobil Oil Company.

He roamed the world on his field researches, and his wife and daughter followed. Miss Jablonski was schooled in Texas, Egypt, England, New Zealand, Morocco, Mexico and on the European Continent. Her girlhood memories include life among the Maoris in New Zealand, rattlesnake-shooting in Texas and a trip with an Arab tribe across the Sinai to Jerusalem.

She won a scholarship to Oxford in 1938, but "the war broke out" in Europe and back she came to the United States, for good. She became an American citizen in 1943.

International relations aroused Miss Jablonski's passionate interest at Cornell University, from which she was graduated in 1942, and at Columbia, where she received her master's degree the following year. As a young reporter at the Journal of Commerce, she scooped the world with an exclusive story about how Venezuela's new development minister was going to nationalize the oil companies and take away their royalties.

It soon became obvious to her that oil was the key, above all the "astonishing" reserves in Saudi Arabia, she said.

"I began to look at the map of the Persian Gulf, the exits to the Hormuz Strait, and I realized that that little lake, twice the size of Lake Michigan, could control the world."

She began her long treks to the Middle East in the early 1950s and once spent six months in the Arabian desert, part of it "locked up in splendor" as King Saad's guest in his harem. "It was a trip back in time, back to the sixth century," Miss Jablonski said. She sat with the bearded Bedouins, who were "dispensing justice, like Moses," behind them a city of tents on drifting sands.

"The Saudi Arabians are special people in my book," she said. "Tall men who survive the harsh desert, wash in sand, go for days without food and water. Their tribal manners are the essence of hospitality and courtesy. They know they are men and they look you straight in the eye."

Women, though, she was, they accepted her, asked after the health of her father and the excellence of the grazing in New York, talked about oil through the starry nights.

An Arab ruler with whom she was staying recently told her: "You came here many years ago, when nobody was interested in us." And, she added, "They don't forget that you were nice to them when they were nobody."

1864 LAW CUTS TREASURE IN HALF

HOWELL, Mich. (AP) — A man who discovered $34,000 in a field 2½ years ago has to split the money with the township where he found it, a circuit court judge has decided.

Judge Paul Mahinske of Livingston County made the ruling under an 1864 state law called the "lost property and stray beast act," which stipulated the finder had to establish his claim within a year of its discovery.

The opinion did not identify the man, who had claimed that under common law he was entitled to all the money.

The money was found in a locked aluminum suitcase buried on a farm owned by Thomas Powell, 29, a former Detroit resident indicted by a federal grand jury in August, 1975, in an alleged plot to smuggle hashish oil to Michigan from Colombia.

Third World looks to us—priest

The condition of the world today compels Christians to think about their social responsibilities. Rev. John Green of Chemainus told the 49th annual convention of the Catholic Women's League of the Victoria diocese in St. Ignatius' Church.

Green, who is provincial representative for the Canadian Catholic Organization to Development and Peace, said last week that the present social and economic order fails to meet the human needs of the majority of people. The poor, especially in the Third World, he said, are calling for a new economic order based on just distribution of wealth and power.

In Canada, he added, there are signs that people want to find new approaches to make better use of human and natural resources. Much of this activity is occurring on an ecumenical basis, he said, and while only a minority is concerned, this minority is significant because it is challenging the whole church to live the gospel message in the needs of the people.

Diocesan president Mrs. Glenda Wilson of Courtenay reported that all women's councils on the Island were involved in aspects of community service.

Rev. Joseph Jackson of the host church told about his recent trip to Africa, including Sierra Leone where he and Bishop Remi De Roo attended the opening of a cathedral. Jackson was a missionary in Africa, primarily in Sierra Leone, for 25 years before coming to Victoria.

One hundred members from the Island attended the convention, representing councils from as far north as Campbell River.

The new executive for the diocese, elected at the convention, was installed by Rev. Gerald Herkell, diocesan chaplain. In addition to Mrs. Wilson, president, they are: vice-presidents, Helene Banner, Alberni; Elaine Beatch, Lake Cowichan; Sylvia Duggan, Campbell River; treasurer, Ruth Hazlett, Courtenay; secretary, Margaret Rennie, Courtenay.

The new executive for the army, elected at the convention, was installed by Rev. Gerald Herkell, diocesan chaplain. In addition to Mrs. Wilson, president, they are: vice-presidents, Helene Banner, Alberni; Elaine Beatch, Lake Cowichan; Sylvia Duggan, Campbell River; treasurer, Ruth Hazlett, Courtenay; secretary, Margaret Rennie, Courtenay.

He was elected by the army's high council in Sunbury-on-Thames last week and will assume his new responsibilities in July.

Brown was appointed territorial commander for Canada and Bermuda in 1974 and, prior to that post, was second-in-command of the international Salvation Army.

He was born in London, England, in 1913, and emigrated, at an early age, to Canada with his parents.

REVEREND JOHN FRANCIS SPEAKING

Arnold Brown visits in June

Victorians to meet Army's new general

During this period he compiled a history of the army's first 50 years in Canada titled What Hath God wrought?

As secretary for publicity and special affairs, he was active in presenting Salvation Army programs on radio and television. This Is My Story on radio and The Living Word on television, both broadcast throughout the U.S., Canada and Australasia, were the outcome of his work.

Brown

In this capacity he launched the army's centenary appeal for the upgrading of the social services in Britain and the creation of new projects. He became chief of staff several years later.

Mrs. Brown, the former Jean Barclay of Montreal, married the new general in 1939.

As wife of the chief of staff she served as president of the Army Guides and Life-Saving Guards and world president of the Nurses' Fellowship.

Archivist aims to preserve the documents of faith

Church history is made every week by Greater Victoria congregations but not many keep records of it.

The provincial archives is determined to reverse this process.

Kent Haworth who, in addition to being an archivist in the public records and manuscript division of the provincial archives, is also honorary archivist for the Vancouver Island and Gulf Islands diocese of British Columbia, is currently sorting out the records of the Columbia Coast Mission. A member of St. George's Anglican Church, Haworth has a university student as his assistant, thanks to the summer hiring program of the department of labor.

His assistant is Felicity Page, daughter of Canon Brian Page of St. Barnabas Anglican Church, and a third-year anthropology student at the University of Victoria.

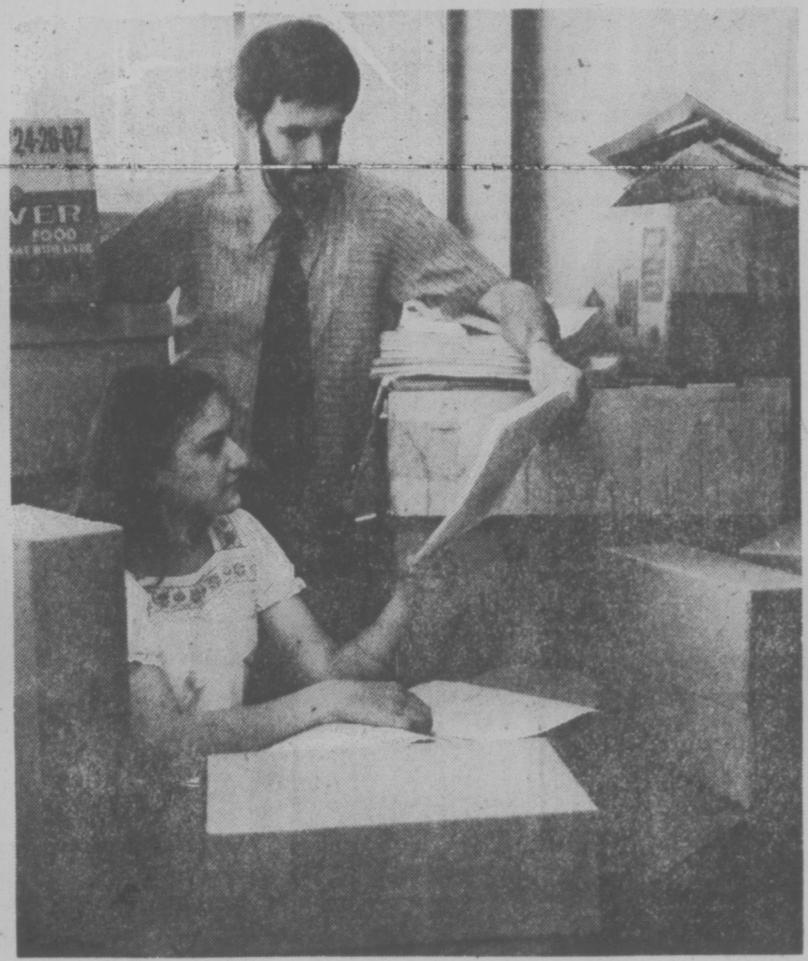

Felicity is busy sorting out photos, letters, news clippings, publications and other items and placing them in acid neutral folders and acid neutral cardboard boxes to preserve them.

Haworth is getting letters from Vancouver Island parishes who are getting ready to celebrate their 100th anniversaries.

"Unfortunately many of them don't have archives," he said. "This points up the need for preserving records."

He sees archives not as "cultural frills," as some people label them, but rather as "administrative necessities."

"I had an instance of it recently," he explained. "Bish-

Crowd of 2,000 expected

Witnesses to meet in Colwood

An estimated crowd of 2,000 persons is expected at the circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses in Juan de Fuca recreation centre in Colwood next weekend.

Preparations for the meeting of Witnesses from southern Vancouver Island include the setting up of 18 departments to care for the delegates' needs.

Dawn of new day illustrates vision

The dawn of a new day in the countryside illustrates a simple but basic fact about vision, Christian Science lecturer Michael Thorneoe of Sheffield, England, told a public meeting in the MacPherson Theatre last week.

Before the sun rose, everything seemed dark and empty and when the light came, it revealed the beauty and color of what really was there all the time, Thorneoe said.

"This hints at the way spiritual perception enables us to see the true nature of creation as perfect here and now," Thorneoe continued. "Such spiritual vision is exemplified throughout the Bible as prophecy. It shows us the wholly perfect nature of man as the reflection of God, Spirit."

(Roy) Gartrell needed some important documents in connection with land owned by the church. The necessary information was in a diary but nobody knew where the diary was.

The archivist is setting up a workshop for people interested in learning how to care for church records. It will be held in the fall and will deal with all aspects of archives.

Generally speaking, there are three requirements in keeping archives, he said. Security against theft, fire and water are of prime importance; trained people are needed for handling and cataloguing, and continuity of the program is a must if the records are to be made available to those needing to use them.

He's taking his honorary job very seriously. "You have to know how the church operates in order to keep valid records," he said. "So now I'm a member of St. George's parish council."

He's finding out what the Anglican diocese is in the way of archives. He's getting them organized and eventually they will be made available. He's sending out letters to editors of all Vancouver Island and Gulf Island newspapers in search of Columbia Coast Mission records that may be buried away in personal effects.

"I'm also interested in sermons," he said. "They reflect the social attitudes of the day and tell a lot about the times and the congregations."

He's also looking for registers of marriages, baptisms, confirmations and burials. He has the first two minute books of the Victoria rural deanery dated about 1899. "Where are the rest?" he asked. "We don't know."

Haworth believes there must be many budding anthropologists, sociologists, journalists, photographers and historians in local churches. Getting archives programs going for their churches could be a learning experience for them and a valuable asset for their congregations.

He's willing to give advice on any aspects of such a program. He can be reached at 387-6671.

Missionary to Korea will speak

A missionary to South Korea — Willa Kernen of Saskatoon — will speak at a service sponsored by the Victoria Presbytery and the United Church Women's Presbytery in the chapel of Metropolitan United Church at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Miss Kernen, associate director of the Bethany Lay Training Centre of the All-Korea Women's Association of the Presbyterian Church in Seoul, will lead an informal discussion on the Church in South Korea.

She first went to Korea in 1954 after graduating from the United Church Training School, now the Centre for Christian Studies in Toronto, and a year at Yale University for language study.

At the Galleries

An exhibition of paintings entitled Inner Visions of a Great Mystic, by C.K.G., is currently on view at the Jharana-Kala Gallery, 824 Johnson. C.K.G. is the artistic pseudonym of the Indian Yogi, Sri Chinmoy.

Chinmoy spent 20 years from the age of 12 as a member of an ashram in profound meditation and spiritual discipline. The mystical vision he achieved during this period is reflected in these works of art.

Besides being a prolific artist, Sri Chinmoy is a well-known writer and lecturer. He also conducts meditations twice a week for United Nations delegates and staff in New York and directs the spiritual activities of some 60 Sri Chinmoy Centres around the world.

The works being shown have been selected from a group of 165 that were painted by the artist as a gift to Canada.

New exhibitions at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria include a tribute to the inspiring creative force of Glenn Toppings, whose contributions to the arts of the west coast "has yet to be properly assessed" according to a recent gallery publication.

Toppings' untimely death in 1974, at the age of 42, cut short an influential career. His shaped canvases, fibreglass sculpture and kayaks form the core of this exhibition of his later works.

Accompanying this exhibition, through to June 19, are the West Coast Art Show (award-winning work by today's commercial artists), and the gallery's recent acquisitions.

The annual general meeting of the gallery membership takes place at the gallery, 1040 Moss, May 26 at 7:30 p.m.

An exhibition of paintings and drawings by Merrill Peck at his studio, 308 King George Terrace, will be held May 16-18. The public is welcome and hours are 3 p.m. to 8 p.m.

COMIC OPERA BY PUCCINI

One of the most truly comic of comic operas is Puccini's one-act masterpiece, Gianni Schicchi. Most wryly known for its lovely lyric soprano aria, O mio babbino caro (O my beloved daddy), it brims with deftly ensemble numbers and solos.

Next Thursday through Saturday the opera workshop of Victoria Conservatory of Music is presenting the opera at Ephraim Evans Hall of Metropolitan Church, Pandora at Quadra. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

The story of the opera concerns the death of Uncle Basso and the gathering of grieved relatives who mourn noisily until it is learned that old Basso's money, his mills and his mule have been left to the local monastery.

Enter Gianni Schicchi, whose daughter and one of Basso's young descendants provide the seemingly star-crossed love story. Schicchi, shrewd but despised by the Basso kin as a "nobody", is prevailed upon to assist in fabricating a different will.

Kaleidoscope Thrives

Loaded with praise and heavily dated to the end of June, the Kaleidoscope Theatre Company took off for Toronto this week to do 14 performances in Toronto schools before heading for Ottawa, where they are to give a day-long masque workshop.

The workshop will be followed on May 21 with a performance at Ottawa University of artistic director Lili Gorrie's adaptation of Paul Galli's The Snow Goose.

A fast return trip will bring the company to Chilliwack on May 24 for a scheduled performance and this will be followed by other inferior dates.

On June 1 they have been invited to Kelowna to participate in the Summer Theatre Festival.

For the balance of the tour Kaleidoscope is solidly booked in the Greater Victoria area.

Unofficially regarded by Canada Council as one of the three best professional children's theatre companies in Canada, the company is now commanding reasonable fees.

Comments Brian Paisley, B.C. Drama Association representative, "Sooner or later people will have to realize that they are going to have to pay for such good professional work."

Among the accolades Kaleidoscope has received from teachers, children, parents and drama authorities is a recent comment from Irene Watts, formerly of Alberta Theatre Projects and now with Vancouver's Jabberwocky children's theatre: "I have written to John Neville (of Edmonson's professional Citadel Theatre) about Kaleidoscope," she writes in a letter to company manager Barbara McLaughlin. "You are the best company for children I have ever seen."

SPOTLIGHT ON THE ARTS

Van Isle Opera — that's the short form the Vancouver Island Opera Society has adopted — is grabbing an early start on the 1977-78 season by presenting Mozart's The Magic Flute at McPherson Playhouse in mid-September.

A cast is already at work under musical director Rory Hammond and dramatic director Colin Skinner.

The society reports a turnout of more than 40 singers for the auditions held last month. Chosen were Robert Hall, Karen Smith, Hans Steffan, Nan Long, Algirdas Kynas, Aubrey Cobham, Peter Bradley, Ian Westmacott, Dennis Goodwin, Erica Kurth, Anne Bennett, Olga Grilikis, Alix Klemann, Judith Johnson, Elizabeth Zunti and Mary June Petter.

Conductor for the performances will again be Seattle's Stanley Chapple, and noted textile artist Carole Sabiston has come up with set and costume designs.

At The Belfry, the Gladstone-Fernwood cultural centre, a high-powered and versatile program from now until late summer reflects the imagination and initiative of artistic directors Don Shipley and Pat Armstrong.

Assisted by a grant from the B.C. Cultural Fund, the summer calendar was underway this weekend with a fascinating performance, Friday by noted Canadian dancer-choreographer Judith Marcy.

Tonight, Vancouver singer-actress Kathleen Payne, in high favor with Eastern Canadian critics, will be performing a program of songs ranging from Gilbert and Sullivan to Jacques Brel, Bruce Cockburn and Stephen Schwartz.

The poster goes on with classical guitarist David Russell, the guitar festival of new Canadian plays, the Belfry's own production of El Grande de Coca Cola, a gripping play — the Madman and the Nun — widely regarded as a 20th century classic; and three weeks of a return engagement of Belfry's original "Faith" — On the 24th (through July 31).

This production then goes to the David Y. H. Lui Theatre in Vancouver for a five-week run.

Top of the line for jazz enthusiasts within the next few weeks is the prospect of the Oscar Peterson appearance June 1. Paul Mascioli is bringing the renowned pianist to the Royal Theatre and will supplement his appearance with the Victoria-based Paul Mascioli Big Band.

'La Pasionaria' Returns to Spain

MADRID — Aging Communist leader Dolores Ibarruri, the fiery La Pasionaria of the Spanish civil war, has returned home quietly after nearly 40 years in exile to lead the party in next month's elections.

Mrs. Ibarruri, 82, who had lived in the Soviet Union since fleeing Spain in 1939, flew to Madrid on Friday aboard a Soviet Aeroflot jetliner and was whisked away to an apartment in the northern part of the city.

Her return was kept low key, apparently to avoid inflaming wartime passions and embarrassing the government of Premier Adolfo Suarez, criticized by right-wingers for legalizing the Communists. But a Communist official said Mrs. Ibarruri would fulfill a promise to campaign for the party in the June 15 parliamentary race, first free election in Spain in four decades.

Mrs. Ibarruri, whose nickname means The Passionate One, is a candidate for parliament in the northern Basque centre of Asturias and is given a good chance of being elected.

HOLLYWOOD — Actor Jimmy Cagney, 77, is recovering nicely from "the mildest kind of stroke," his wife says, and may be released from Good Samaritan Hospital in a few days. "All his vital signs are great," Frances Cagney said Friday. "His heart, his blood pressure and pulse are all just fine. He should be leaving the hospital in a day or two," it was revealed only Friday that Cagney has been hospitalized for a week.

LOS ANGELES — Mavis Electra Finch, widow of actor

'LA PASIONARIA'

Peter Finch, Friday challenged his will, saying it was invalidated by a 140-year-old British law. Mrs. Finch asked a Superior Court for permission to assume control of her husband's estate, left to four children from an earlier marriage. The estate was valued at $15,000 for herself and their seven-year-old daughter.

CHICAGO — Gene Chandler, who rocketed to fame in the 1960s with the hit song "The Duke of Earl," was sentenced Friday to one year in prison for selling nearly a pound of heroin to an undercover agent.

R. C. Priest's Son Ordained as Priest

NEW YORK — The son of a Roman Catholic priest is being ordained into the priesthood. A spokesman for the Paulist order says the case may be the first of its kind since the Middle Ages.

Thomas Holahan Jr., 29, son of Rev. Thomas Holahan, 52, is among nine members of the Paulist order to be ordained today at Manhattan's St. Paul the Apostle Church.

The Paulist spokesman said that so far as he has been determined, it is the first time since the medieval period, lasting from 500 to 1500 AD, that a priest's son was becoming a priest in the Latin western rite of Roman Catholicism.

The western rite requires its priests to be celibate.

However, Father Holahan, chaplain of the North Shore Community Hospital in Manhasset, N.Y., did not enter a religious order until 1968, six years after his wife's death.

The elder Holahan was ordained Dec. 20, 1975. He had worked in a bank here for the 25 years before that.

His son entered the Paulists in 1972 and for the last year has been a deacon at the campus Christian centre at the University of California in Berkeley, Calif.

Although Catholic priests of the western rite were not allowed to marry in the Middle Ages, they often kept concubines and their male offspring were permitted to join the priesthood.

The western rite requires its priests to be celibate.

NUREYEV PLEADS FOR MOM

WASHINGTON — Rudolf Nureyev was only 23 but already winning fame with the Soviet Union's prestigious Kirov ballet company when he made his fateful decision to defect to the west on June 17, 1961, at a Paris airport.

The troupe was on tour, about to fly to London, and Nureyev learned that he was being called back to Moscow at once.

He has never been allowed to see his family since leaving Russia.

Friday, frustrated by 16 years of silent waiting, Nureyev made a "desperate" public appearance on Capitol Hill in hopes it would force the Kremlin to let his sister and 73-year-old mother travel out of Russia to visit him.

Now 39, Nureyev told the Commission on Security and Co-operation in Europe that Soviet officials have pressured his mother to sign a statement that she was "too old" and ill to travel — and didn't want to see him in any case.

Tests on the wine showed it contained about 6 per cent hydrochloric acid and the Darmund public prosecutor was investigating whether it was a result of faulty manufacture or had been deliberately mixed in.

WINNIPEG — Isabel Auld of Winnipeg has been elected chancellor of the University of Manitoba for a three-year term beginning June 1. She was chosen at a meeting of the university board and senate Friday. She is the university's ninth chancellor and the first woman to hold the post.

VANCOUVER — Dr. John Dick of Vancouver has been appointed medical director of the Workers' Compensation Board. WCB chairman Dr. Adam Little, who made the announcement Friday, said Dick's wide medical expertise and his interest in the diagnosis and treatment of occupational disease will make him a valuable addition to the board. Dick, who was born in Scotland, has specialized in internal medicine.

CHICAGO — Gene Chandler, who rocketed to fame in the 1960s with the hit song "The Duke of Earl," was sentenced Friday to one year in prison for selling nearly a pound of heroin to an undercover agent.

UVic Grads: 33% Seeking Jobs

Twenty-five per cent of 1976 University of Victoria grads were unemployed six months after graduation, a joint study undertaken by the university's counselling centre, and manpower committee has found.

A further seven per cent of students who either returned to school, went travelling or became homemakers, indicated they would have preferred to be working, bringing to 33 per cent the actual number of grads seeking work, the report concludes.

The survey of graduates also discovered that more than 50 per cent of those who found jobs one-third of all grads were performing work unconnected with their university studies, although 75 per cent of those with jobs said they were satisfied with their employment.

Work found by grads included salesmen, waiters, millworkers, loggers, miners, truck drivers and laborers.

The 25 per cent unemployed figure is up from 16 per cent unemployed when a similar survey was taken six months after the 1975 class graduated.

But Dr. H. D. "Acc" Beach, director of the counselling centre and chairman of the manpower committee, warns the statistics may be misleading.

The unemployment figures may be inflated because "it seems likely that a higher percentage of people who were unemployed responded to our survey than the percentage of those who had obtained work." (There were 341 responses out of 667 grads who were mailed questionnaires.)

Survey results also showed 32 per cent of the unemployed were not willing to leave Victoria to find work.

An additional 32 per cent preferred to stay on the Island or within the province. And six per cent said they were satisfied with being unemployed.

Each said other factors have to be taken into consideration. There has been a consistent historical pattern of a number of university grads taking six months or a year to settle into a job after they've finished their studies.

The ultimate unemployment rate for university graduates is well below the average for other groups.

Recent Canada Manpower statistics show in the highest unemployment age category—the 15 to 24-year age group—8.4 per cent of university graduates were unemployed while 39.4 per cent of those with less than Grade 8 education were unemployed.

In the over 25 age group, university graduates fall to 2.8 per cent unemployed.

At UVic, the Faculty of Education had the best result in placing graduates. About six per cent of elementary teachers were unemployed and 15 per cent of secondary ones.

All four public administration grads who responded to the questionnaire were working, and results are inconclusive since no word was received from the 11 other grads.

Of the seven social welfare program graduates who responded to the questionnaire, only two had found work, leaving five unemployed.

Arts and Science grads varied depending on their majors with sociology, psychology, mathematics, philosophy and English reporting high unemployment.

An English major and a French major both became truck drivers; the only bacteriology-biochemistry student who said he found a job is working as a millworker; the only creative writing grad who responded to the survey joined the armed services.

Biology grads found jobs as a waiter, laborer and miner; Geography grads were working as millworkers, waiters and a logger; two psychology grads took millworker jobs; a visual arts grad took a waiter's job and a theatre grad became a salesman.

Beach said when university students take jobs for which they are over-qualified, they probably displace some of the less educated in these jobs.

Beach said during the career exploration period just after graduation, there is a lot of job changing. He said he would like to follow UVic grads for 10 years to see what pattern emerges.

He is taking a tentative step in this direction with a second survey of the 1976 grad class a full year after graduation and six months after the earlier survey.

"It's been the greatest thing that ever happened to me," said Saddlemeyer. "It works pretty well instantly."

A 10-minute stimulation with the transmitter gives him hours of relief.

Turnbull has only implanted three of the $2,000 stimulators because he views the operation as a last resort, to be used when surgery, drugs and even psychotherapy have failed.

Turnbull sees ethical problems, as well, in the indiscriminate treatment of pain.

"I'm very critical of myself and others who treat pain," he said. "What we really do is teach the patient to stop using the word (pain) in exchange for seeing him every few weeks and taking his blood pressure and talking to him."

Of the four operations Turnbull has performed, three have been successful. Two patients use the transmitters with complete success and a third controls his pain with self-hypnosis. A fourth operation failed when the centre of the patient's pain could not be found.

The operation is a risky one and Turnbull and his associate, Dr. Mort Low, are unsure why it works. Dr. Low said he believes the painful areas are somehow connected to the thalamus, where close clumping of nerve bundles makes it easy to control pain in large areas of the body.

Electrical stimulation activates pain-inhibiting nerves, but not pain-inducing nerves, Low said. Use of the radio signal, which Saddlemeyer says produces a tingling sensation, stimulates the pain-inhibiting nerves.

Although the operation is costly, Turnbull said it is an economical replacement for the many consultations and operations required by pain victims.

For Saddlemeyer, his pocket radio has meant a new life.

His only problems: explaining his electric underwear and apologizing to friends for the static his transmitter causes on nearby radios.

BUTTON CUTS PAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — For five years, the burning, aching pain of John Saddlemeyer's back injury, suffered during a dockyard industrial accident, turned him into a cripple—unemployed and dependent on pain-killing drugs.

Now, thanks to a tiny radio transmitter and a probe medically implanted in his brain, the husky former longshoreman can push a button and eliminate the agony in hours.

Saddlemeyer is one of a handful of patients treated with a radical new method of handling intractable pain developed by Dr. Ian Turnbull of Vancouver General Hospital.

Saddlemeyer's surgeon referred him to Turnbull after repeated operations to remove scar tissue around the injury failed to produce results.

In a complex brain operation carried out with Saddlemyer awake, Turnbull inserted a probe into the thalamus, a walnut-sized section in the centre of the brain.

and a special jig to determine the exact location of the probe, Turnbull sought a bundle of pain-inhibiting nerves on the side of the thalamus.

With the patient's help, Turnbull slowly closed in on the exact nerves controlling the source of the pain by stimulating the thalamus with an electric current passed through the probe.

When the patient decided the pain was being relieved by the electrical current, Turnbull released a small electrode from the probe. When the treatment was finished, the electrode wires led from the brain centre to a point above the right ear.

From there Turnbull ran the wires down to a small radio receiver implanted in the right chest area. With a tiny pocket transmitter, the patient can send electrical current to the nerve centre at the push of a button.

"It's been the greatest thing that ever happened to me," said Saddlemeyer. "It works pretty well instantly."

New Life for Downtown Boston

BOSTON (AP) — A wave of new immigrants, young professionals, is bringing new life to Boston's downtown area.

The new settlers are taking over downtown neighborhoods abandoned by people who had enough money to leave and are saving the city from boarded-up theatres, deteriorating architecture and afterdark desertion of city streets. Thousands of young professionals between the ages of 20 and 35 are moving from towns across the United States to work and live in Boston.

They have moved into shabby neighborhoods and turned sleazy tenements and rickety warehouses into chic, expensive places to live.

"They are an important factor in the revival of the city as a place to live," said Alexander Ganz, research director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority.

They have made downtown Boston the fastest-growing residential district in the metropolitan area and have stopped the decades of flight to the suburbs.

In 1960, 45,626 people lived downtown. Now there are 10,000 more, and by 1985, the Boston Redevelopment Agency expects there to be 72,500.

Since 1970, the steady decline in the city-wide population has stopped and the city has begun to grow again.

"Our city census shows that the influx is concentrated in the 25-to-34 age group," said Ganz. "These are middle-class young adults, largely professionals."

Since 1971, they have been moving into the city at a rate of about 5,000 a year.

"They are finding jobs in higher education, medicine, finance, insurance, engineering, law and business," said Ganz. "We have had growth in jobs in the service areas all through the '70s, even while we were losing jobs in manufacturing and retail trade."

For generations, this has been a city of immigrants, Irish and Italian mostly, whose standard of success was getting enough money to move to the suburbs.

Aeronautics and Space Administration is sending people up to take a look," he said.

Redifon took 17 months to build the simulator and an additional month to complete acceptance trials before the unit could be dismantled and shipped to Canada. In January, PWA received ministry of transport approval of the simulator as a pilot-training tool, and the airline has since been operating it 8½ hours a day.

"There is a greater feel difference between some of the planes in our fleet than there is between the feel of controls on this simulator and most of our 737s," said Revel.

The machine comes equipped with wrap-around picture windows, so that pilots see night scenes generated by a computer. Previously, pilots could look at film reruns of landing approaches but realism was lost if they made any manoeuvre different from those of the original camera ship.

Computer imagery permits synchronization of the simulator's movements with the changing panorama seen from its cockpit.

Revel's exuberant behavior in the first officer's seat gave a convincing demonstration of what the new simulator can do but he emphasized its serious purpose.

He said pilots can be passed out on the 737 simulator after 14 hours logged in the first officer's seat and another 14 hours in the second officer's seat, followed by an additional 3½ hours in the air.

The twin-jet 727 is the workhorse of the PWA fleet. Until it bought its own simulator, PWA was paying CP Air $21,000 a month to use its nine-year-old 737 model.

The simulator bought from Redifon is the first 737 unit to have hydraulically operated motion on four axes, visuals on side and front windows and a simulation of the United States - built airfield approach monitor VAM installed on all PWA planes used in northern service.

VAM equipment projects information on small, clear screens mounted in front of pilots. The suppliers of VAM doubted whether Redifon could come up with a plausible simulation but Revel said PWA is pleased with what has been achieved.

"We are the only people anywhere to have VAM in a simulator and NASA National Space Administration is sending people up to take a look," he said.

"Our surveys show that many of them grew up in the suburbs and now prefer city life," Ganz said. "They like the cultural and recreational facilities and the access to young people in their own age."

Their impact is most evident on the neighborhood known as "the waterfront." Ten years ago, it was 104 acres of dilapidated fruit warehouses, wharves and timber docks. Now it is Boston's most trendy, glistening neighborhood.

But these new Bostonians have other ideas.

Edward Rowley, director of student placement at Harvard Business School, said many graduates are attracted to living in Boston. Many come from New York and New Jersey.

"Obviously, New York has a lot of things Boston doesn't," he said. "But a lot of people feel the price of New York is too high, both economically, and in how much time it takes."

The size of Boston is usually mentioned when people talk about why they came here.

"New York seemed just too big," said Fran Jacobs, 26, a assistant manager at a Boston office.

"There are too many people. I always had a feeling there that I never knew an area very well and couldn't know enough people. Boston seems much smaller and more manageable."

Compared with most cities, Boston is compact. The city covers 48 square miles, while San Antonio, Texas, which has about the same number of people, sprawls over 154 square miles.

The city offers a wide variety of entertainment including 40 art galleries and 30 theatres. On a typical weekend, there may be performances of 50 different plays and concerts.

"There's an awful lot of talent hanging around," said Alonso Saunders, 30, a lawyer who discovered Boston when he went to Harvard.

"It's not Broadway, Lord knows," but you can see and do a comparable range of things here."

Ground Bound Ride Exciting

VANCOUVER (CP) — A senior Boeing 737 pilot with Pacific Western Airlines spent a recent afternoon flying under the Lion's Gate Bridge and stalling and rolling.

For a finale, he erased into the control tower of Vancouver International Airport.

Russ Revel was showing off his company's new $3.3-million 737 simulator built by Redifon Flight Simulation Ltd. of Britain.

The machine comes equipped with wrap-around picture windows, so that pilots see night scenes generated by a computer. Previously, pilots could look at film reruns of landing approaches but realism was lost if they made any manoeuvre different from those of the original camera ship.

The twin-jet 727 is the workhorse of the PWA fleet. Until it bought its own simulator, PWA was paying CP Air $21,000 a month to use its nine-year-old 737 model.

The simulator bought from Redifon is the first 737 unit to have hydraulically operated motion on four axes, visuals on side and front windows and a simulation of the United States - built airfield approach monitor VAM installed on all PWA planes used in northern service.

VAM equipment projects information on small, clear screens mounted in front of pilots. The suppliers of VAM doubted whether Redifon could come up with a plausible simulation but Revel said PWA is pleased with what has been achieved.

A Good Looking Privacy Fence

Whether bordering your patio or screening your house from the driveway, this saw-tooth pattern fence will give you all the privacy you want, plus striking good looks.

The built-in storage section is roomy enough to store all sorts of outdoor equipment. It goes practically unnoticed, however, because it fits right into the saw-tooth design.

And look at the beautiful way plantings go into the triangular openings along the edge of the patio. The rough-sawn boards make an attractive backdrop whether painted or stained. Because of the board-on-board construction, this fence adds much to the appearance of your home whether viewed from inside or outside.

The plan shows you the basic construction method for this fence, along with a materials list to help you decide what it will take to make the fence the length you need.

CHESSMASTER

By George Koltanowski
International Chess Master PROBLEM
By W. H. Bettman, USA

BLACK: 6

WHITE: 6
White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE EVIL WAY OF CHESS

In the Guild of the Assumption, at Cambridge, England, established in 1384 A.D., there is a record of the ordinances, one of which makes reference to a curious prohibition:

"If any of the brethren be wont to wander in the streets at night without good cause, or wont to play chess, and if 'he will not amend, he shall be expelled forever and lose all benefit of the guild."

COULD KARPOV BEAT FISCHER?

By Sir Harry Golombek
This year we are in the midst of the series of encounters known as the Candidates' Matches, the winner of which will challenge Anatoly Karpov for the World Championship title next year. This brings to the fore a fascinating question: How would Bobby Fischer fare in a match against Karpov?

There are some who think we shall never know and that when Fischer refrained from defending his title in 1975 the chess world suffered a tragic loss that will never be restored. I prefer to look on the bright side and hope with all my heart that Fischer will someday return to the fray. How soon this will be, though, is anybody's guess, and meanwhile, we are allowed to speculate as to what would eventually happen if such a match ever takes place.

There are two halves to this question. One, which can only be answered in conjunction with a lot of ifs and hypothetical replies, concerns the form in which Fischer would find himself after such a long absence from the field. We already know that he is capable of making a triumphant return after a long period of withdrawal from the scene, as he did, for example, in 1969 and 1970. But this time the period of absence is already even longer and the dangers of rust tarnishing his bright sword are even greater. But he is said to keep himself up to date with opening theory and the play of the present-day corpus of grandmasters, especially that of Karpov, so it is possible that he might once again display the full force of his genius.

In direct contrast, Karpov is playing more chess than any other world master has before him (with the possible exception of Alekhine). He recently played in a pretty strong tournament at Bad Lauterberg in West Germany and won it by a margin that irresistibly brings to mind the great achievements of Alekhine at San Remo in 1930 and Bled in 1931. He came in first with 12 points, ahead of Timman 10, Furman 9, Sosonko 8½, Olafsson, Liberzon, Csom and Hubner 8, Gilgoric and Miles 7½, Andersson and Keene 7, Torre 6½, Herman 5, Gerusel 4½ and Wockenfuss 3½.

This was a strong field running down to the bottom three who are West Germans not really in the same class as the rest. But, an examination of Karpov's play in the event reveals that it was not of the same superlative quality as, for example, Alekhine displayed in the two tournaments already mentioned. There are too many occasions on which he got into trouble and then had to do a great deal of ignominious wriggling before he could escape from loss or the draw.

This would never have done against Fischer, in his prime and I doubt whether it would suffice to meet Fischer if and when the latter does come to the field of battle.

Nevertheless, there is no denying the giant strides the world champion has been making in the last few years. His odds-giving style now begins to resemble that of the player whom many regard as the most effective player of all time, Emanuel Lasker and, like him, he knows how to maintain and nurture a slight initiative into an overwhelming pressure on the opponent.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. Q-B6, K-N8; 2. Q-K4 mate; or 1. P-Q8-Q, 2. N4-Q2 mate; or 1. P-N8-Q, 2. N8 mate, etc.

Lust for Marks Hurt Colleges

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto president John Evans says students' overwhelming concern for economic security and recognized job opportunities has resulted in antisocial behavior and a lust for marks which is hurting the general arts and science programs.

"Universities never should

Evans said in an interview. "But there is clear evidence that those with a good education have a greater chance at the jobs available and the students must exercise that advantage."

Evans said the dignity of being employed is important and anxiety over jobs is great. The university must look for better ways to decide whom to admit to its professional schools, he said.

"We could look at the applications through other characteristics such as essays or interviews or the student's non-academic record," Evans said.

He also suggested the university could set an entrance mark and then use a lottery system to select students. "But it is repugnant to most of us that we can't come up with something better than a lottery," he added.

Student David Hogg says he felt relieved last year when he was accepted into the university's medical school. More than 2,100 students applied this year for 252 positions. There were 1,500 applicants in 1973.

"All the insecurities about getting a job are gone," Rose said. Medical student David Rose says students are fed up with education for its own sake: "They want school to Both told of intense competition in the general courses. Hogg said the arts and science course is a "savage faculty for marks" where students steal each other's notes and tear required reading sections from texts and library books.

Rose said: "If you had to go to the washroom in a lab, you'd be crazy to leave your lab book out, because it would be stolen before you got back."

Statistics Canada has reported that four months after graduation in 1974, 11.9 per cent of those leaving Ontario universities were unemployed and another 17 per cent were underemployed.

For arts and science graduates, unemployment reached 20.2 per cent, while 38 per cent were considered underemployed. The report assumed that a university graduate earning less than $7,000 a year in 1974 was underemployed.

Old Tires and Frozen Wine in 5.8 Million Tons of Landfill

TORONTO (CP) — In about 18 months the 194-acre landfill site just east of the new Metropolitan Toronto Zoo will receive its last load of garbage. City officials say the site, which opened in 1967, now contains about 5.8 million tons of garbage—enough to cover a football field to three times the height of the 1,800-foot CN Tower. It is dumped on the site at the rate of 3,000 tons a day or five tons every minute the site is open—an equal to about 40 per cent of the city's waste.

Anything but nuclear waste may be dumped at the site and most refuse is industrial liquids and solids and household garbage.

The city keeps statistics on what is thrown out. In one week, refuse included 82 tons of tires, 256 tons of lumber and more than 100,000 gallons of liquid.

Dump foreman John Burden said he is amazed at refuse brought to the site. Once, 15 transport trucks arrived, accompanied by customs officials, to dispose of thousands of cases of imported wine that had frozen aboard ship.

Most of the garbage arrives in huge transfer trucks from six stations around the city.

Another third of the city's waste which comes to the site is brought by private disposal companies.

He said other waste comes in cars, small trucks and vans. Cars are admitted free, but vans and trucks pay from $1 for 285 pounds to $7 a ton to contribute to the mountain.

Odor is not a problem because each day's refuse is covered by eight to 10 inches of fill, Burden said.

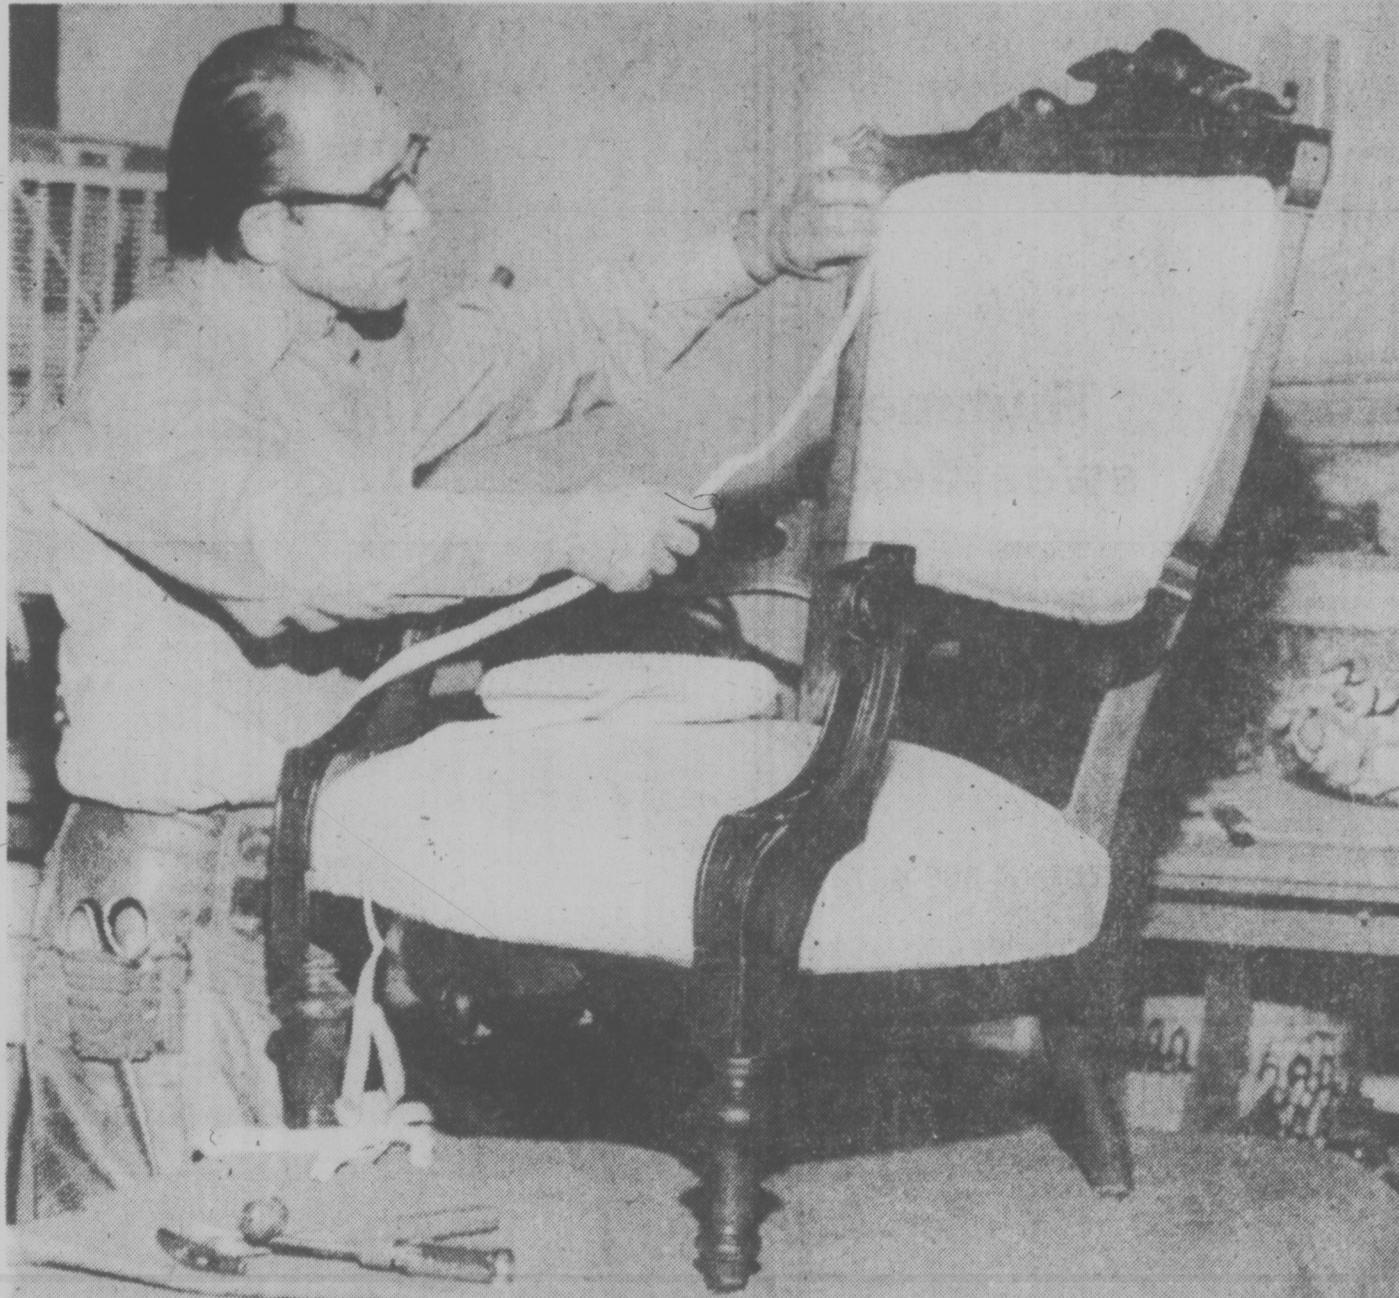

Tom Potter, dump superintendent, says things sometimes are thrown out accidentally and people call to see whether they can come out to search for them.

"I remember a man who phoned up once and wanted to come out to look for his dentures," Potter said.

FERRIES ENDING OFF-PEAK RATES

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia ferry users travelling during off-peak periods in an effort to save money will pay more when the new rates come into effect June 1.

At present, off-peak passengers can travel the four major ferry routes — linking the Vancouver area to Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Sunshine Coast — for half-price Monday through Thursday as well as Saturday. Drivers and vehicles are not eligible.

Off-peak passengers pay $2 instead of $4 for a one-way ticket on the island runs, and $2 for return passage to the Sunshine Coast.

When the new rates become effective June 1, however, everyone will pay $3 for a one-way ticket to the islands and $3 for the Sunshine Coast return ticket.

Bill Bouchard, ferry corporation assistant traffic manager, said the off-peak program, effective last March 7, was to be lifted May 31 and reinstated Oct. 1 but now will have to be reviewed in light of the reduction in fares announced by Premier Bill Bennett.

Bouchard said he did not know whether a revised off-peak program would be reinstated in the fall.

Reduced rates for group travel and handicapped persons are still available under the new fare structure, he added.

Sask. Fires Critical

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The department of northern Saskatchewan asked for volunteers today to help fight a critical forest fire situation.

At least 100 recruits were asked to report to control headquarters here to assist more than 700 men already battling 20 fires, 10 of them out of control.

The situation became critical Thursday when high winds, dry conditions and lightning ignited several new fires.

The most serious fires burning out of control were in the Dore Lake, Weyakwin, Montreal Lake and Fishing Lake areas.

People living at Michelle Point on Dore Lake, 120 miles northwest of here, and at Caribou Creek Lodge on the Hamson Lake Road were evacuated Thursday. Power lines serving Dore Lake was severed by fire Thursday.

Two helicopters and a Canoe aircraft from Ontario were brought in to assist on the fire sites and additional ground supplies were being trucked in from Alberta.

$1B Hospital Bill Faces Province

The annual cost of operating the hospitals in the province may top $1 billion by 1980, Health Minister Bob McClelland said on Friday.

McClelland said the current budget for running the hospitals is $615 million, up from $155 million in 1970.

"The costs have increased by more than 300 per cent during a period when our population went up only 18 per cent," the minister told members of the B.C. Medical Association meeting here for their 77th annual convention. (See the stories on page 6).

McClelland said other medical costs have also soared, from $128 million in 1970 to the current $340 million.

He said the government has committed itself to spend $500 million in new hospital construction over the next five years — a rate of $100 million a year.

By comparison the government spent about $40 million in such construction over the past five-year period.

Construction costs have more than doubled in recent years, he said. Whereas, in 1970 an acute-care hospital cost about $40,000 per bed to build, now the bill is $100,000 per bed.

PARIS (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau left Paris for Ottawa today apparently convinced France will stay neutral on separatist pressures within the Canadian province of Quebec.

At no moment during Trudeau's three-day private visit here did French leaders try to pressure him. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing tried to put pressure on Trudeau to enhance the Quebec independence political aims, Canadian and French officials indicated.

Trudeau, looking slightly annoyed by French reporters' efforts to belabor the Quebec issue, said that the problem of Quebec had not even come up when Trudeau met Giscard Friday at an Elysee Palace luncheon followed by a private talk.

It was left to Gerard Pelleter, Canadian ambassador and an old federalist friend of the prime minister, to provide the Canadian news corps with the prime minister's optimism that Paris will not support Quebec separatism as the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle did in 1967.

Pelleter told reporters that French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud had publicly told Claude Morin, Quebec inter-governmental affairs minister, two weeks ago that France is not competent to become involved in Canadian affairs and will keep out of them.

Because of Morin's visit, Canadian reporters watched for indications during Trudeau's stay that might show French favoritism toward Quebec independence. For instance, it was noted, that Morin had 55 minutes with Giscard d'Estaing, Trudeau had only 46 minutes.

The prime minister said his time with Giscard d'Estaing was spent on two main issues — nuclear proliferation and the state of Western democracy.

Pressed by French newsmen Friday night to speak up on the Quebec issue, Trudeau said pointedly he would have found it "impertinent" to be questioned officially in Paris about "attempts to break up Canada."

Trudeau also appeared to be irritated at the number of questions Canadian reporters asked him Friday about Quebec. He told the reporters that such questions might be raised when he returned home.

He said Canadian reporters should stop attempting to bare their souls and to make him bare his on the Quebec issue while they were in France in a situation which is clearly Canadian and which "the French shouldn't have a goddamned thing to do with."

He said a "hell of a lot of intellectual time" is being wasted talking of separatism instead of how to make Confederation work.

The corporation should be operated in future on sound business and insurance principles.

McGeer would not say who he had in mind to succeed him as ICBC president.

The corporation reports revenue was $385 million, compared with $183.4 million at the last report.

Autoplano claims were down from an expected total of 490,000 to 370,000.

ICBC said its sound financial position allows for a program of incentives and reserves, including $52.3 million for safe driving discounts and $11.5 million for a rate stabilization reserve.

Commission rates for autoplano agents were reduced but agents' revenue was up by 50 per cent to more than $27 million because of higher premiums, the corporation said.

McGeer said that in the field of general insurance ICBC now is the biggest underwriter in B.C., and has turned the 1975-76 loss of $4 million into a $1.5 million profit.

He predicted that next year, when the once-a-year car insurance deadline for all drivers is replaced with a month-by-month, cyclical system, there will be little need to continue the practice of hiring large numbers of part-time employees.

The Globe and Mail quotes sources as saying the information could be used by other federal departments, the RCMP and, at the discretion of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, outsiders such as collection agencies.

THE BYRDS

THIS IS A PIPE-LINE, THE ONLY THING THAT STRETCHES OUT FARTHER THAN THIS ARE THE DEBATES ABOUT IT.

BY KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition Leader Joe Clark, who endorsed the idea of a 10-year moratorium on construction of a northern pipeline earlier this week, was forced to eat his words Friday.

He was politically outmaneuvered by New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent, who proposed in a formal motion that the government accept Mr. Justice Thomas Berger's main recommendation for a delay, a motion that was defeated by a vote of 159 to 14 when Clark's Progressive Conservatives sided with the government Liberals and the Creditistes.

The mood of the House during the vote was mainly jocular, but it took a nasty turn when Clark rose to lead his party in voting down the motion. A core of Liberals at that point began chanting "flip-flop, flip-flop," a shot at what Clark had said when the Berger report was brought down Monday.

He, as well as Broadbent, had said then that the idea of a 10-year delay on a pipeline was a good one, but the government accepted Mr. Justice Thomas Berger's main recommendation for a delay, a motion that was defeated by a vote of 159 to 14 when Clark's Progressive Conservatives supported the Berger report.

But Clark qualified his approval; the Berger recommendation was "an important step" that had to be backed up by a full parliamentary debate of the issue, that other evidence had to be considered.

The overall impression, nevertheless, was of a leader committed to a delay in construction.

Berger's evidence, he reiterated Friday. However, the fundamental fact for Parliament and the people of Canada to understand is that there is other evidence yet to come ... which deserves to be considered as seriously as the Berger report.

Service Drunks Now No Longer 'Hidden Away'

There was a time in the Canadian navy when if a sailor got drunk his shipmates would hide him away until he sobered up.

Those days are gone.

The Canadian armed forces recognizes alcohol as one of its major sources of problems, far more serious than drugs.

Now, rather than let a man drink himself onto the "civvy street" before his time, treatment centres here and in Halifax are grappling with the problem.

Major Ray Crabbe, director of the Base Alcoholism Rehabilitation Service in CFB Esquimalt, explains, "In the old days it was swept under the carpet. Their shipmates would hide them but now we have the minimum number of staff to do a job... We don't have that sponge factor any longer."

He estimates the Pacific command has more than 325 actual or potential alcoholics, more than 1,000 that drink alcohol in harmful quantities, and that about $300,000 per year is lost in decreased efficiency, poor decisions and absenteeism.

Crabbe reports senior naval officials here and in Halifax are very much aware of the problem and enthusiastic about the BARS program.

There are three ways a man can be admitted to the BARS program.

He can volunteer, his commanding officer, by referring him to a medical doctor, can have the man voluntarily take the program, or he can be admitted through an administrative order.

Crabbe describes the BARS program as "a multi-discipline approach in which all base and community resources are brought together to help those with a drinking problem to help themselves recover."

He himself, has been involved with fighting alcoholism for the past seven years but reports that BARS only began "getting away from coffee-clutching sessions three years ago."

He sees alcoholism as Canada's major health problem and says servicemen are particularly prone because of the "facilitating environment."

The BARS treatment program lasts for 10 months.

The first 25 days are spent at the base's hospital where a team of professionals including three counsellors who have taken alcoholism treatment specialist courses, help the man and his family.

The days are long, ending at 10 p.m. and parts of the program are regular visits to

Alcoholics Anonymous for the man, counselling, films, exercise and self-assessments.

On completion of the 28-day period those on the BARS course are sent back to their ship or unit.

"We use the buddy system, we marry them to someone. They must report to us regularly, at the minimum weekly, and some almost every day," he explains.

He estimates the BARS program helps about 80 people per year.

Graduates are encouraged to join AA on completion of the 18-month period.

Crabbe says the BARS program "is not the big brother attitude... it's caring and being concerned."

Crabbe says becoming addicted to alcohol can take anywhere from 10 to 15 years "but you don't have to hit bottom to get treatment."

He adds, "Basically, it's good business to try and keep a man who has given 10 to 15 years of his life to the military."

Crabbe says credit for the establishment of the BARS program goes mainly to Capt. Peter Hinton, the former base commander, now retired.

"He was the champion, he pushed to get it going," Crabbe reports. "Above all else, he saw the need and gave us all the resources. Without him we would not be where we are today."

Judge Queries Police Actions

The actions of two city policemen in an assault case were described as "somewhat extraordinary" Friday by Judge Leslie Cashman by Johnston and Bates to the attorney-general's attention.

Coleman and Bates said Huth did strike Coleman, but Huth denied this and said he was pushed, shoved, punched and choked into unconsciousness, awaking in a city police cell.

Medical testimony showed Huth suffered bruises and abrasions and injuries "consistent with heavy blows and severe choking pressure around the neck," Coleman said. Bates said Huth in a headlock but Bates said he didn't recall choking Huth and didn't know if he unconsciously did so.

Johnston said he will draw the policemen's testimony to the attention of the attorney-general but he told Cashman the policemen "felt they were facing an unknown situation and I suggest what they did was not entirely unreasonable until they got the two ladies out of (Huth's) car and (found) there was no possible danger of or violence from them."

Cashman made his comments after granting Huth an absolute discharge on the jury's conviction for dangerous driving.

Cashman said he couldn't reconcile the two verdicts of an absolute discharge means it is deemed not to be a conviction under the Criminal Code.

Huth had been accused of criminal negligence in the operation of his car, but the jury reduced this to the lesser included offence of dangerous driving.

Cashman, however, disagreed with the jury's verdict on the driving charge.

He said the jury faced two conflicting accounts, one from the police and the other from Huth and two friends, on both the criminal negligence allegation and the assault allegation.

Cashman said he couldn't reconcile the two verdicts of the jury.

"Regrettably, I can't find the jury verdict appropriate," he said of the dangerous driving conviction.

He added that this was the first time he has had occasion to openly disagree with a juror.

Then he said that it was "appropriate" to direct that Huth be given an absolute discharge.

Huth was represented in court by Dermot Owen-Flood.

Friday, Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said there would be no departmental inquiry into the affair.

"It was Huth, not our men, who were on trial," Gregory said.

Government Proposes Bargaining Changes

The Government Employee Relations Bureau has proposed substantial changes to the public service employees' bargaining structure, a union spokesman said Friday.

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, said the bureau made the proposals Thursday, the first day of negotiations for a new master agreement between the B.C. government and the 33,000 employees.

"I would say that the proposals, if accepted, would result in significant changes to the structure that we have," Fryer said.

However, he said, he is hopeful both sides will be able to reach agreement on the matter and it will not amount to a major stumbling block.

Fryer said Thursday was taken up with discussion about the bargaining structure and a timetable for negotiations for the master agreement and 11 component agreements.

He said neither side laid out proposals for the new contract.

The BCGEU will hold a bargaining conference June 10 to put the finishing touches to its contract package, he said.

Richard Higgins, a senior civil servant, was appointed in January to conduct a review of the Public Service Labor Relations Act.

Higgins prepared a report in 1972 which was the basis for the legislation granting public service employees collective bargaining rights.

OFFICERS HONORED

Long service awards have been presented to four Saanich Police officers at a ceremony held at the Saanich municipal hall.

Sgt. William Chisholm received an award for 24 years of police work. He was with the RCMP from 1951 to 1953 and the Calgary police from 1953 to 1963 before joining the Saanich force on June 1, 1963.

Sgt. Raymond McLean, who completed 20 years service in October last year, served with the RCMP from 1951 to 1957 before joining Saanich on Feb. 15, 1965.

Cpl. Edward Hernblad, also with 20 years service, started in 1953 in the Regina police force. He joined the Saanich force on Feb. 15, 1965.

Deputy Chief Eric Avison completed 20 years of service with the Saanich Police department this year, having joined the force on Nov. 4, 1957.

The government's "wait-and-see attitude" makes it impossible for Camosun to do decent planning, Camosun College council chairman Janet Baird said.

She said the college meanwhile is an "illegitimate child."

"We were told the College Act should be introduced when the legislature resumes, probably in June. After it is enacted, Camosun will be able to borrow funds on its own."

Meanwhile any hope of getting its facilities upgraded by September has vanished.

The further delay may have to take someone else's castoffs."

The college's Lansdowne campus is leased from University of Victoria, and the Mount View School campus, where the college wants to expand, is leased from the school district.

Mrs. Baird said the education ministry doesn't want to sink capital funds into someone else's buildings.

As well as upgrading Lansdowne and Mount View, the college has a $10 million capital renovation and construction proposal it has been sitting on for months.

The long-delayed College Act should be introduced when the legislature resumes, probably in June. After it is enacted, Camosun will be able to borrow funds on its own.

Meanwhile any hope of getting its facilities upgraded by September has vanished.

The further delay may

$22 million in an effort to get government approval.

The main thrust of the reduced plan is to consolidate the seven scattered campuses to three major ones at Lansdowne, Interurban and Mount View.

Boy 'Fair'

An 11-year-old Saanich boy is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today after being knocked from his bicycle by a car on Cedar Hill Cross Road Friday.

Saanich police said Colin Boerkamp, of 3941 Lasalle, was riding on the sidewalk when he suddenly swerved onto the street and into the path of a car driven by Lachlan MacMillan, 67, of 4060 Cedar Hill Cross Rd.

Malahat Patrol Faces Cash Crisis

This Year Could Be Last

Staff Sergeant Ted Foster, commanding officer of the Colwood RCMP station, recognizes the club's worth and would like to see it get some kind of grant.

"The club members perform a function that is just beyond the scope of police duties, yet they have never stepped out of line as a civilian authority," Foster says. "These people go a step further than we have the time to do and can often handle a lot of things before we arrive."

The club is incorporated under the B.C. Societies Act as a non-profit organization and so its members cannot hire themselves out.

"We can only hope for donations or grants to be able to keep going," says Gordon.

"And if we don't get some, this year will be the last for the Malahat Safety Patrol," warns Don.

The club estimated that in making the patrols last summer, $2,600 came out of the members' pockets for gas and oil alone.

"Some of our members are on fixed incomes and with talk of gas going up to $1 a gallon by summer, we just can't afford it any longer," says Gordon. And he adds with whistful sadness,

"We've given help to people from Newfoundland, to Alaska and Florida so the club and its work is known the length and breadth of North America... it's a pity."

Patrol PR man Gord Korber . . . is it over and out?

Oh dear, every time you open a paper or turn on your radio there's a story about money.

It's either how much someone hasn't got; or how much something is going to cost you next time you go out to get it.

Very little nowadays do you get for nothing. So when you suddenly find that you may lose something you have been getting for nothing, you stop and think awhile.

That "something" is a community service that has been provided to motorists, local visitors, and the police when they warrant it. And the members stop and offer help, leaving in their wake a little card with the club's crest and the words: "I am sorry you had difficulty on our highway. You have been assisted by a member of the Juan de Fuca CB Radio Club."

And the members stop and offer help, leaving in their wake a little card with the club's crest and the words: "I am sorry you had difficulty on our highway. You have been assisted by a member of the Juan de Fuca CB Radio Club."

Each Friday from 6 to 10 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 10 p.m. (plus Mondays on long weekends) and including Labor Day weekend, club members drive back and forth over the 13-mile piece of roadway from Goldstream

Park to the Bamberton cutoff looking for trouble.

One man in each car rides shotgun to handle the radio as two vehicles leave both Goldstream and Bamberton at the same time and pass each other somewhere at the top. Mishaps, including accidents or stranded motorists are reported to the club's base station in Victoria and then to the police if they warrant it. And the members stop and offer help, leaving in their wake a little card with the club's crest and the words: "I am sorry you had difficulty on our highway. You have been assisted by a member of the Juan de Fuca CB Radio Club."

Roy Baistone of Victoria is current club president and Jack Denith is the Malahat Safety Patrol coordinator. But Gordon Korber, who's in charge of public relations, does most of the talking.

"Basically, we're up there to assist the motoring public," he says. "We carry water cans, gas cans, safety cones, flares, orange traffic vests and signs that say Slow Stop."

Don Cosby, a past president who was involved in setting up the patrol, says that after the first year the Colwood

RCMP felt it was such a good example of community spirit, it would be good if the club could keep it up throughout the year.

"We tried it for one year but it became too much," says Don.

They cut it back to 16 weeks ends (four of them long ones) during the summer but now they fear that even has become "too much."

The problem is, there are no club vehicles and each member — only about half of the 20 regular members take part in the patrol — takes a turn in supplying his own vehicle.

To join the Juan de Fuca CB Radio Club and pay your first year's membership it costs you $10. After that it's $3 a year. But that money barely runs the club. None of it goes toward financing the Malahat Patrol.

"All of that, the gas, oil, wear and tear on the vehicles which range from heavy four-wheel-drive trucks to Volkswagen Beetles, is the individual member's responsibility," points out Gordon. "And each car does about 125 miles at least during its four-hour shift."

The club, which also backs the police in other community work such as searching in the bush for missing hunters and children and providing marine rescue assistance, has tried to get financial help to keep the Malahat Patrol going.

"We tried to get an LIP grant," explains Don. "But one of the conditions is that you must provide employment for someone who has no job. So that's out. We've approached the Department of Travel and Tourism and the BCAA and we were turned down by both. The BCAA told us it already provides a similar service for its members."
